Grand Council of the Indians of Michigan—Speech of Gen. Cass—Our Indian Policy.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH., Saturday, July 27, 1855.

Here I am in the midst of a Council of Indians, composed of Sachems from the various bands living in the State of Michigan. They are called together by the Indian Commissioner, with a view of arriving to some common treaty arrangements, by which the various treaties heretofore existing shall be extended and merged into one general treaty, which shall grant lands to each Indian family for a farm; together with such pecuniary aid to their schools, and to their agricultural interests, as their circumstances may require. The delegations are from the Chippewas, Ottawas and Pottawattomies, of Michigan, and represent between 6,000 and 7,000 Indians. The wise and beneficent policy of the Government is to settle the Indians in large bodies, according to their own choice—as it respects which band shall come together, and at what points they will assemble. And when they are thus assembled in colonies, to divide their lands to them in generality, so that each Indian family or proper member of the tribe, will have his own farm in his own right.

This will break up the roving habits of the Indians, and by the foundation of agricultural communities, lead to regular citizenship, which the beneficent laws of Michigan admit. It is understood that the Christian Missions now among the various bands, will go with those among which they are carried on, and conduct their missions generally in the colonies to be established; and that religious instruction will be in the hands of the Missionaries, and probably the administration of the schools among the Indians also, with the concurrent approbation and action of the Government, or of the Indians themselves, so soon as they shall be sufficiently advanced in intelligence and civilization.

From sources of information which are perfectly reliable, I have thus sketched the policy of the Government. Indeed, the Indian Commissioner, Hon. GEORGE MANYPENNY, and the Indian Agent, H. C. GILBERT, Esq., both clearly and decidedly declared this policy to the Council.

We have now been at the Council four days, and have marked the progress of these difficult and delicate negotiations. We have observed the tact and sagacity of the Indians, influenced by two distinct and opposing forces—the one bad and adverse to the Government policy, and the other good and coincident with it; and have also remarked the candor and firmness of the Indian Commissioner and Agent. We are free to say that the gentlemen of intelligence and candor residing at Detroit were frank and cordial in their commendations of the policy and conduct of these officers of the Government. Gen. CASS declared that at last the Government had adopted the true policy, and that it was fortunately committed to an able and independent Commissioner, whose heart was in the work, and to an efficient agent cordially cooperating with him. In these declarations, Mr. STUART, member of Congress, concurred, as well as other gentlemen who were present.

The value of each measure as indicated above, and of such officers to carry them out, will hereafter be seen when it is remembered, that there is a class of white men among the Indians who desire to keep them in their roving wild state, that they may employ them in hunting and fishing, and get the products of their toil for a drink of whisky or a gay handkerchief. These men are opposed to the Indians becoming confined to the soil as agriculturists and wish them to receive, as heretofore, all their interest from the Government in money, which they instantly take from them for claims of debt. These men are at the Council in force, and have induced some of the Indians to ask for money instead of land. But up to this present writing the Commissioner and Agent have steadily declared that it was their policy to grant the Indians lands in Michigan, in lieu of lands granted to them for homes west of the Mississippi, and to which they have refused to go. And while I write, the Indians by bands are in consultation with reference to selecting the locations which they prefer. I have no doubt but that the Government will respect their choice, if they do not divide up in their selections into too many colonies. The policy is to have as few and as strong settlements as possible. When the Council is closed I may, as far as is proper, communicate the results.

It was pleasing to observe during the consultations, that the Indians had made sensible progress in comprehending the simpler elements of civilization. The influence of sinister white men lessened as the Council proceeded, and the Indians gradually came into the policy of the Government. They then with great unanimity requested that in granting them homes the Government would grant them titles, such as are granted to white men. The Indian Commissioner replied that this should be done, with some necessary condition which should prevent white men from obtaining the lands from the Indians. Some asked that their lands might not be taxable; but others declared that they wished to be like white citizens, and support the State. This policy will dissolve the bands, and make them individual Christian citizens.

Several interesting incidents and facts have occurred in Council. I will name one or two. In the midst of the deliberations, to-day, Gen. CASS entered the Council. His presence instantly produced a universal movement. The Council immediately suspended business, and the Indians crowded around the venerable man, and saluted him as their Father. One came forward as speaker, and his speech was the eloquence of the heart. The old General replied in a manner worthy of such a man; and, without having had any conference with the Government, his speech was coincident with its policy, in every respect. What he said was received with profound attention and confidence. The effect of his presence and speech was a legitimate triumph of a long life of honor and usefulness.

In his speech, General CASS alluded to the ruinous effects of whisky among the Indians, and advised them to banish it. Whereupon, one venerable chief rose and said—"When I hear that there is any fire-water among my people, I search until I find it, and then I pour it out on the ground."

No one could be present in the Council without observing the superiority of the Christian Indians over the Pagan in manners and dress and speech. And it was incidentally remarked that those bands have increased, among whom there had been for a long time an efficient Christian Mission; while those had decreased where there had been no such Mission.

Under the policy of the Government proposed above, I think the Indians of Michigan may be preserved, civilized and absorbed into the body of citizens of the State. A consummation devoutly to be wished. OBSERVER.

THE TURF FOR 1855.

The Trotting Season on Long Island—Another Contest between the New-York and Boston Horses.

Since the beginning of April last the sporting world have manifested a lively interest in the trotting of fine blooded horses on the Long Island Turf. The season has been extended much longer than usual, and from the present aspect of matters will continue until Autumn, when the "Fall Races" will be announced. On Monday, the 30th inst., there was another exciting contest on the Centreville Course, Long Island, between the Boston horse Chicago Jack, and the favorite of New-York, Lady Franklin. The match was made for $2,000, two mile heats, to wagons, which are the same conditions as that of the former race. It seems Lady Franklin was the winner of the last match with the Boston nag, but the Bay State people were not fully convinced that Lady Franklin was able to accomplish the feat again, and therefore sought another trial of speed between the celebrated steeds. Lady Franklin was driven by HIRAM WOODRUFF in his peculiar style, which no person can imitate. The noble horse Chicago Jack was driven by Mr. ROSE. While the drivers were engaged exercising their animals and down the horse stretch, the trackers of each horse stood firm in their allegiance, and the market quotations fluctuated, and the Chicago Jack stock fell off twenty, five or thirty per cent. The odds were $100 to $75 and $70 on the mare, which continued throughout the first heat; but were one to one in her favor when starting for the second heat. The first mile of the first heat was most beautifully contested, as the horses were often side by side, and repeatedly held a length apart. It was indeed very closely contested, but Lady Franklin won the heat by a distance of some twenty yards, and did not appear in the least wearied.

Both horses looked in fine trim when receiving the word from the judges for the second heat, and the drivers appeared to let them do their best. However, the Lady was too speedy for her competitor, and of that fact, she fairly convinced the audience, by winning the heat without the show of any extra effort.

The Judges gave their decision in favor of the New-York horse, and the Bostonians now feel quite satisfied.

Annexed we give the summary:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| H. WOODRUFF, name r. m. Lady Franklin | 1 | 1 |
| C. ROSE, name b. g. Chicago Jack | 2 | 2 |
| Time | 5.11 | 5.11 |

On Friday of this week, a second trial of speed between the trotting horses Hard Road and Major Rogers will take place on the Union Course, L. I. This is a very exciting match, and we hear that some $15,000 is staked on the result.

POPULATION OF THE CITY OF BROOKLYN.—The following returns of six out of the eighteen wards into which the city is divided, are all that have thus far been prepared by the Marshals:

| Fourth Ward | 12,528 | Sixteenth Ward | 15,471 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Thirteenth Ward | 14,[illegible] | Seventeenth Ward | 5,409 |
| Eighteenth Ward | 6,[illegible] | Eighteenth Ward | 2,[illegible] |
| Total | [illegible] | | |

In 1850 the Fourth Ward had a population of 11,032, showing an increase of 1,256 in five years. The remaining Wards (Fourteenth Ward not included) comprise the late city of Williamsburg and town of Bushwick, (now Eastern District,) not including the Fourteenth Ward, which together had a population of 34,519 in 1850. The present census shows a total of 44,222, without the above named Ward, which will increase the total population of the District in the neighborhood of 50,000.

The increase in the Eastern District has not been as great as was expected, and in all probability the population is not as large as it was two years ago. This decrease is owing to the general depression of business in the different ship yards. Two years ago about 7,000 men were employed in those yards, and at the present time there are not more than 1,000 men employed in all the yards.

The following shows the population of three out of the five county towns of Kings County compared with the census of 1850:

| Towns. | 1855. | 1850. | Inc. | Dec. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| New-Utrecht | 2,730 | 2,129 | 601 | — |

| Flatlands | 1,600 | 1,155 | 445 | — |

OSWEGO COUNTY.—The following table showing the population of Oswego County, compared with the population of 1850, has been made up at the Clerk's office, and is probably correct. There has been an increase during the last five years of 7,319, carrying the population of the County up to 70,000.

Dreadful Tragedy on Board a Ship at the Balize—Three Men Murdered.

From the New-Orleans Bee, July 24.

The ship Colchis, Capt. DOUGLASS, left this port on Tuesday for Philadelphia, with a crew of eleven green hands. On arriving at the Head of the Passes, the captain found he could not go to sea with the crew he had, and telegraphed to the city for more men.

On Saturday evening the bodies of two men were found floating in the river by a vessel laying near the Colchis, and were identified as belonging to the latter ship. One of them had a horrible wound extending clear around the lower part of the brain, which had been given, from appearances, with a heavy, sharp piece of wood, or some other instrument, and also very severe wounds on the back, the thighs and the legs.

The other had no marks of violence about him. On being interrogated as to the matter, the mate of the Colchis, whose name is PETERSON, stated that that morning he had sent five men out to fast the gib, and that by a rope giving away, they had fallen into the water, and but three of them had been rescued. This story was accepted, but the following day circumstances transpired which gave rise to strong suspicions that they together with another of the crew, had been most fully murdered.

On Sunday, the officers of the Colchis having concluded to go out to sea, despite the inefficiency and small number of their men, the commanding officer of the revenue cutter, stationed at the Balize, came on board, for the purpose of examining the list of the crew, and on examining the roll found that three men were not present. The absence of the two above mentioned was accounted for, but the mate said he did not know what had become of the third man.

This led to suspicion in the mind of the commander of the cutter that there was foul play somewhere, and he instituted vigilant inquiry. That evening a Spanish oysterman was found, who informed him that a day or two previous, a sailor's chest containing a corpse had been given to him by the mate of the Colchis, to take ashore and bury, that he had interred the body and was ready to discover the place, and submit to arrest from the proper authorities. There can be but one of the most evident reasons to suppose that this was the body of the missing man.

Upon the same facts having been made public, the Coroner of the parish of Plaquemines repaired to the spot and held an inquest on the two bodies which had been found, and a verdict was rendered that their death had been caused by some one or more of the officers of the Colchis. The names of these men were JOHN SCHMIDT and CARL DAVID; that of the missing man, —— ANTHONY.

Our informant states that the greatest excitement is prevailing among the pilots at the Balize in regard to the officers, and that the commander of the revenue cutter had refused to allow the ship to go to sea. But no arrests had yet been made. At the time of these occurrences, Capt. DOUGLASS, it is stated, was sick in his room. Capt. DOUGLASS, it will be remembered, is under bonds to appear before the First District Court, on a charge of manslaughter, in having caused the death of a long-shoreman named PATRICK CALLAHAN, in the Third District, a few weeks since.

We may here add that the master of the Odessa, which was towed down by the same steamer that took down the Colchis, stated that he had never seen men more brutally treated on shipboard than were those on the Colchis on their way down. We hope in our next number to be able to give some further particulars of this dreadful affair.

From the Delta, July 24.

An inquest was held on the bodies, and the jury returned a verdict that they had met their death at the hands of some persons unknown, on board the ship Colchis. The names of these last two persons were JOHN SCHMIDT and KARL DAVIDS, and the name of the other man who was missing, and who is supposed to have been carried ashore in a chest, was JOHN TRAINOR, and he belonged to this city.

The Colchis was prevented from going to sea for want of sufficient seamen to work. The mate is represented to have beaten and abused his crew inhumanly because they knew as little about the profession. Captain DOUGLASS, who, it will be recollected, was arrested here for the murder of a long-shoreman on his vessel, was confined to his bed from illness during the whole time, and knew nothing, it seems, of what was going on. The whole matter, we suppose, will be investigated in a few days.

SWINDLING MADE EASY.

How Mr. Tuckerman Schyltested the Eastern Railroad Company.

The following extract from the Report recently submitted by the Examining Committee to the Stockholders of the Eastern Railroad, at Boston, concerning the robbery of the Corporation by its late Treasurer, Mr. TUCKERMAN, shows how that sort of thing is done,—as well as the extent to which it was carried on:

Generally, we may say that during the whole period of the embezzlement in office of the late Treasurer, the correctness of his accounts, and the accuracy and completeness of his method of keeping them, seem to have been approved by every Committee, whether of Stockholders or Directors, chosen or appointed to examine them, until at last, on July 10, 1854, a gentleman, acting on the account of other parties, discovering the integrity is shown all premises, certified in substance that, "having been requested to examine the books and accounts of the Treasurer of the Eastern Railroad Company," he had "examined the cash account and found the items of payment properly vouched."—And "examined the postings of the entries from the journal to the ledger since July 1, 1850, and the amounts stated in the trial balance of 30th of June, 1854, and found them correctly posted;" had "also examined the stock ledger and certificate books, and" found "the certificates issued had been correctly posted into the ledger, and that the number of shares recorded was 28,534."

In the last case, a green deception was practiced upon the examiner, in his examination of the stock ledger, which examination was conducted in this wise: Mr. TUCKERMAN having previously marked on a sheet of paper certain amounts of stock sold by the stockholders, and really and truly accounting in the total to the whole number of shares which should necessarily represent the whole legitimate capital of the Company, handed said sheet to the examiner to be by him footed up, while the examination of the stock ledger was going on, and then, Mr. TUCKERMAN, having first checked and scared the ledger with private marks so as to prevent himself from blundering in his artful enterprise, and therefrom different sums said by him to be entered in the ledger as the whole number of shares standing in the names of all the shareholders. The sums so read off from the ledger by Mr. TUCKERMAN, amounted in all to 928,534, thus being the whole amount of the legitimate stock of the Corporation, and the aggregate corresponding with the total of the various amounts of stock, marked on the list held by the examiner, he unhesitatingly pronounced the ledger to be correct, and the actual issue of shares to agree with what should be the whole outstanding stock of the Company. In short, all examinations of Mr. TUCKERMAN's books which have been made before and up to the time of the final catastrophe seem to have been commenced and carried on upon the theory that no fraud could by any possibility exist therein, but barely the mere chance of error; and each examiner relying on the frequent commendations of his capacity, and the much vaunted name of his method of keeping accounts, seems to have allowed himself to have been lulled into entire confidence and unsuspecting trust; but, be that as it may, it is certain, that Mayor and lawyers, merchants and accountants, have been alike deceived. Is it too much to add that the blind have led the blind, and all have fallen into the ditch together!

And here let us ask what have been the real character and condition of the books kept by Mr. TUCKERMAN. He certainly kept no book which can be dignified with the name of cash book. Loose memoranda on the margin of check books, carried irregularly without much regard to dates or chronology from one book to another, pocket memorandums, and flying scraps of paper, seem to have formed the grand staples out of which were otherwise rated his journal entries, and we much doubt whether these loose and fugitive memorials were ever examined by any auditing Committee. Indeed, if they had been, they would have thrown upon the track no more light than sufficient to make the darkness more distinctly visible.

The stock ledger seems never to have been footed up, (nor, indeed, the dividend sheets prepared for the Stockholders,) by any Examining Committee. The balances of stock standing on the stock ledger do not agree with the amount carried to the dividend sheet, and, at any time, since the January dividend of 1847, the whole amount of stock standing in the name of Stockholders on the dividend sheet been ascertained by adding together the separate amounts carried out against their several names, an over-issue must have invariably been discovered, unless, perhaps, in an instance, when having first paid the whole dividend on all the outstanding stock good and bad. Mr. TUCKERMAN altered the dividend sheet so as to contain on its face only the legitimate issue—a labor and trouble to which he seems to have never thought it worth his while a second time to subject himself. The stock ledger shows an over-issue of six hundred and nine shares, while the last dividend sheet makes an over-issue of six hundred and sixty-three shares, amounting at par to $66,300, which sum, at least, we think, considering that some of the over-issue stock was sold by Mr. TUCKERMAN, at more than [illegible]

[illegible] stock, has been allowed to the Treasurer by having with the Clerk [illegible] charged by the Treasurer, is practice by no means to be justified—especially [illegible] the adoption of a simple rule or by-law, providing that no certificates shall be signed by either officer, until each of them shall be satisfied that the parties in whose name it is to be issued shall be entitled to receive it, nor until the old certificate is returned and cancelled would, if fully enforced, cut off (except in cases of collusion between the President and Treasurer) all over-issues at once and forever. And the adoption of such a rule or by-law, we respectfully press upon the attention of the stockholders.

Mr. TUCKERMAN declares that his first over-issue of stock was of five shares, in the year 1846, but of this we have found no trace on the books of the Company. The first registered over-issue brought to our notice, purports to have been made under date of September 17, 1846, and we regret to add, that it seems to involve a double fraud. It is a fraudulent transfer, over, as we understand, the assumed and fictitious name of John L. Howe, of stock standing to the credit of the Company's to the Institution of Savings in Roxbury, as collateral security, to secure a loan expended note of said Howe. On the dividend sheet of the January following, said stock is entered as owned by said Institution. The last over-issue of stock seems to have been consummated in August, 1853, by an over-issue of seventy shares, and, as usual, [illegible] under par.

[illegible] Mr. TUCKERMAN's income [illegible] the Corporation, cannot be disclosed, even to any without prejudice to the interests of the Company, and from which, we are assured, and have reason to believe, the Company may yet derive great benefit, instead, as Mr. TUCKERMAN declares, an original expenditure of [illegible]

We should state, however, that there are claims and rights appropriated by Mr. TUCKERMAN for the Company's benefit, of the nature of which we are not, for prudential reasons, by the counsel of the Company advised, and with regard to [illegible] the other we can form no opinion, though Mr. TUCKERMAN asserts with great and apparently real confidence, that from both of these we can yet to some large returns.

It is known that Mr. TUCKERMAN had but little property—it may be a few hundred dollars—when he first became Treasurer of the Corporation; an accession thereto of a few thousand dollars, arising from his marriage, had naturally been absorbed in his family expenditures. What, then, you will ask, has become of the money abstracted by him from the Company's funds? Our reply to this question, though apparently honestly aided by him in our inquiries, is at best but an approximate conjecture.

His real estate in Temple-street, he alleges, cost him in the year 1846, over and above the income [illegible]

His lands in Newton and Brighton cost him, as he says, in the year 1850 [illegible]

His lands lying wholly in Newton, over and above the incumbrances thereon, he states cost him [illegible]

His loans to the above-mentioned Mr. WILKINSON, to secure which the above-named life policy was assigned, could have commenced in the year 1846 and ending in the year 1851, amounts, he asserts, to [illegible]

An investment of a small sum, and uncertain, which, we are advised by the counsel of the Corporation, cannot be disclosed, even to us, without prejudice to the interests of the Company, and from which, we are assured, and have reason to believe, the Company may yet derive great benefit, instead, as Mr. TUCKERMAN declares, an original expenditure of [illegible]

Which deducted from the whole amount of his defalcation [illegible]

Leaves a loss to the Company of [illegible]

We should state, however, that there are claims and rights appropriated by Mr. TUCKERMAN for the Company's benefit, of the nature of which we are not, for prudential reasons, by the counsel of the Company advised, and with regard to [illegible] the other we can form no opinion, though Mr. TUCKERMAN asserts with great and apparently real confidence, that from both of these we can yet to some large returns.

It is known that Mr. TUCKERMAN had but little property—it may be a few hundred dollars—when he first became Treasurer of the Corporation; an accession thereto of a few thousand dollars, arising from his marriage, had naturally been absorbed in his family expenditures. What, then, you will ask, has become of the money abstracted by him from the Company's funds? Our reply to this question, though apparently honestly aided by him in our inquiries, is at best but an approximate conjecture.

His real estate in Temple-street, he alleges, cost him in the year 1846, over and above the income [illegible]

His lands in Newton and Brighton cost him, as he says, in the year 1850 [illegible]

His lands lying wholly in Newton, over and above the incumbrances thereon, he states cost him [illegible]

The building of his house, he represents, received on outlay of [illegible]

His loans to the above-mentioned Mr. WILKINSON, to secure which the above-named life policy was assigned, could have commenced in the year 1846 and ending in the year 1851, amounts, he asserts, to [illegible]

An investment of a small sum, and uncertain, which, we are advised by the counsel of the Corporation, cannot be disclosed, even to us, without prejudice to the interests of the Company, and from which, we are assured, and have reason to believe, the Company may yet derive great benefit, instead, as Mr. TUCKERMAN declares, an original expenditure of [illegible]

His investment in a patent for tanning leather, he says, cost him, moreover, an additional [illegible]

We have assumed his expenses of living over and above his salary, never more than this Corporation than $1,500 per annum, though increased by an additional yearly sum of $[illegible] [illegible]

SARATOGA GLEANINGS.

NUMBER FIVE.

CONGRESS HALL, SARATOGA, Saturday, July 28, 1855.

We were never at the Springs when the fashionable crowd on low ran on this occasion. It was quite sufficient for the boys to fill their glasses, and the crowd is now so great that one is constantly reminded of the pool of Bethesda, and the poor man who complained of being hooted because he could not use to go down with him into the water. Here we do not have to go down, as the water flows up to us, but if we are depending upon it in order to be healed, we might now remain on dryland, for it is almost impossible to get a drink, so great is the multitude. The morning drinks are changed with the gay crowd, and one is every day exclaiming, "Saratoga is the place of places, the Bodan-Bodan of Ameriqua!"

The time for dignitaries has arrived, and there is a goodly number to place upon my list, and there are probably many more here that I have neglected mentioning about. I now remember in a letter from Saratoga, not long since, that Mrs. RYAN was here, "and as much a fixture at the Springs as ever Mrs. NAAM was at Bath." For what purpose Mrs. NAAM visited Bath every one knows, I believe, and neither do I know for what purpose Mrs. RYAN does fit to come to this place rather than to any other watering-place; neither do I care to know. But I see people here reason after reason, who come for their health, but not being conspicuous in any way for wealth or beauty, nobody takes the trouble to misconstrue their motives.

There is DORSEY LINCOLN, of Boston, who has been here every Summer for more than forty years, and is certainly entitled to the appellation of fixture, if anybody is; but I do not see that it detracts from his dignity or his respectability. Neither his good sense nor Christian integrity has ever been impeached, neither do I imagine they have been in danger from any of the follies or vanities of Saratoga life. Very well I know him to be an example in all that is noble and good.

There is a notion, among a class of people who have neither right nor title, our desire to be called fashionable, that fashionable people are the representatives of all the folly and heartlessness of society. I have never yet seen any class of society exempt from folly, and if one wishes to be a faithful reader or chronicler, he will not confine himself to any one class. Some people think the religious portion of the community should have their faults carefully concealed, whatever they may be, lest religion should suffer from representing its professors as anything but perfect. Now religious people are not wholly good, and fashionable people are not wholly corrupt. Christians, as a class, are among the most refined and intelligent and gentlemanly of men, though I see many who have not the self-denial to eschew the vulgar practice of smoking and rolling tobacco like a sweet morsel under their tongues, while I really think to drink wine is no more genteel, and far less filthy. Therefore, I say they are not perfect. Their peculiar theories and habits, too, give them often a stiff and unwelcome air, which is not particularly heinous, and yet far from agreeable. A word in season now and then may do them good, and aid them to speak words in season more effectually. Among fashionable people, the faults and follies are of a different kind; but these may be found among them deep-thinking and deep-feeling and truly noble-minded and warm hearted people, who care less for the dress and display to which they indulge, than those who stand idle of and cavy and condemn.

There is another class of people who do not dress with taste, and do not dance at all, who are seemingly self-denying, philanthropic, and devout; who commit quite as much sin in gossiping about the dress and dancing of others. Mrs. RYAN is here, and so is Miss C. E. EKEMEN, one eminent in the fashionable world, and the other in the religious; yet, if one may judge from appearances, they are friends, and have many points of congeniality. In the subjects on which Miss E. is endeavoring to enlist all sensible people, they heartily agree, and those who buy her book, Letters to the People on Health and Happiness, will see these subjects are worthy the consideration of all thinking people, who sincerely desire the mental, moral, and physical elevation of woman.

We noticed Judge GRIER, of the Supreme Court, at the Springs this morning, and last year we noticed by his side his beautiful daughter.

General LUMAN is one of the fixtures at the United States also, and says he should stop there if he had to bring his own pork and beans, in order to have a comfortable meal. He is the gentleman whom your printers last Summer made me say was pretty blessed of dignified and portly.

It is three Summers since I first introduced you to this nice old Quaker gentleman, strolling to and fro upon Union Hall piazza. You will have to go very early in order to see him at the Springs, for he is one of those old fashioned, old school, "all of the olden time" gentlemen, who believe in

"early to bed and early to rise,
Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise."

At least we presume this is the way he acquired health, wealth and wisdom, and if it is the way he acquired twenty also, we beseech all gentlemen to follow his example, for we have rarely seen all these qualifications so remarkably combined in one person.

Unless you have seen him and heard him I can give you no idea of this gentleman we are just going to meet, who greets you with such a hearty good morning, says something so funny you are ready to die with laughing, and walks on, without seeming to think how much you wish he would stop and say something more. It is GEORGE WOOD, of Washington, the author of Peter Schlepmel in America, which is reputation enough for one man, though it is said by those who know, that he is publishing another, called the Modern Pilgrims, which is to eclipse Peter entirely.

There is Mayor WOOD, drinking Congress-water. I should think it would have a peculiar relish and benefit for him, after breathing for a year the atmosphere which he is compelled to live in. And there is Mr. BRADY, one of his predecessors, and Judge MORRIS, of habeas corpus liquor law renown, and I imagine this same law will make a renown for many who would otherwise have gone down to posterity unknown and unsung.

Mr. DEMPSTER has been here a long time, but has not warbled a sing le note, and keeps himself so secluded that it is difficult to get a peep at him. But we are all hoping the unrivaled ballad singer will not leave without giving us an opportunity to revel once more in those sweet sounds.

Hon. FRANK GRANGER is always at the United States too, and always at the Spring for just half an hour before breakfast, during which time he is overwhelmed with congratulations, and are they are half though he disappears.

There are Assemblymen and Congressmen without number, and merchant princes—men who have traveled round the world, and men who are going a-travel. There are dashing Californians, who have made fortunes in "an incredibly short space of time," and no matter how; and there are plenty of quiet, unassuming cultivated people, who may have fortunes still, may not—nobody cares; in some way, they have acquired treasures of knowledge, which are of more value than gold, aye, than fine gold, and it is with these one takes comfort,—who make you in love with humanity. Then there are young men who are neither one thing nor another, except as they contribute to your amusement for an hour, of which class the old lady who is not much of an object is one, and the last interesting communication we had from her was that she was very little most, but lives mostly on vegetables. The rest of us are not so fortunate for our only meats but vegetables are scarce up to us in so tempting a state that we cannot resist, and if no vegetable seems to grow, it must be the condition of all who stay here. Our Saratoga correspondent need not make such beasts concerning place or people, as if it were possible for so insignificant a spot to vie with Saratoga!

THOMASTON, (Me.), Wednesday, July 18, 1855.

Notwithstanding the heat, which came upon us rather suddenly, our little party accomplished a drive yesterday through some of the loveliest scenery of Maine, called "The Garden of the State." From the hill eastward a fine view is obtained of Thomaston, its main street looking like a strip of forest, so well is it lined with trees; and the drive to Rockland is a very agreeable one. This compact little city, lying on the sea border—a long headland only shielding it from the mountain surf—presents a complete contrast to West Thomaston, of which town it once formed a part. The streets are busy with life and business; the inhabitants are a "fast" people; excitements of all kinds are rife, and you are immediately aware on entering it, that you are in one of the busiest of seaport towns; while the seclusion and extreme quiet of its neighbor is equally remarkable. Some of the lime quarries are close to the water. There is a large new hotel called Thorndike House, and another, we were told, is building. Thence we drove at the foot of the hills along the water-side, and obtained a succession of fine seaward views; now through scattering groves, now open—the smooth expanse sprinkled with islets, and a range of islands visible in the hazy distance, like the blue outline of hills on the horizon's verge. On the other hand the mountains rose in relief against the sky. Crossing several hills we reached Rockport, a village of considerable size, the dusky framed houses perched on rugged eminences, and overlooking ravines filled with spruce and pine woos. The surface of the ground is very rocky and uneven, and most of the houses are small; the place reminds one of some parts of Galena, and is equal in natural position. An inlet of the sea, which they call Goose River, winds through part of the town, fringed with small evergreen trees and brighter foliage, and there is a superb view of its entrance into the sea—the spacious cove, and the blue limitless expanse, with long islands in the distance. The mountains which we had approached in the morning's drive, towered into something like imposing grandeur before us. Turning from this exquisite prospect, which must afford a continual feast to eyes capable of appreciating Nature's beauty, we drove on, gradually ascending, and finding the country grow and more romantic, till we arrived at Camden. This small village lies close at the foot of the mountains, and upon a bay which is said to be the finest harbor in Maine. The road approaching it winds along the base of a rocky hill, with an abrupt descent on the other side to the water, over piles of moss-covered rocks and ragged trees. The Mountain House stands in the centre of the place, and all looks rural enough to satisfy the most fastidious fugitive from the city. Turning to the left, we stopped to let our tired horse rest at a farm-house nearest the mountain (it was a comfortable homestead, and we were welcomed by a highly respectable-looking elderly man, the ideal of a Maine farmer, who bade us alight, had our horse taken out, conducted us into the house, and brought us some cool, soft water from one of the springs near. The large kitchen, adjoining a small sitting-room, was the picture of neatness, its floor scoured to rivalry with the snowy cloth that covered a table on one side. The pen of America's most gifted novelist, Mrs. ANN S. STEPHENS, might have described this picture of home comfort,—as a farm-house peculiar to New-England, for it has features like no other,—with the original character of its inmates. They stared when we talked of climbing the mountain, whose rugged acclivity seemed almost perpendicular, for the noonday heat was intolerable; but finding us determined not to lose what we had come to see, they directed us to climb the fence and ascend the hill to a red cow grazing at a distance, and we should find near there a stone wall, beyond which was a path leading upwards. The cow was so good as to stand still till we gained the spot; but some of our party declined encountering more fatigue and reposed under the shade of a tree, against a boulder covered with soft moss, till our return. The mountain side is covered with huge fragments of rock, from the crevices of which bushes and small trees growing, afforded a slight shelter from the burning sun; and the ascent, though very steep, was not difficult to those used to clambering. A little more than half way to the summit the shade ceased, and seating myself on a precipitous rock that overhung the sheer descent, I contemplated one of the most glorious sea-side pictures that ever enchanted an artist.

The whole expanse of Penobscot Bay, dotted near the shore with tiny wooded islands, sprinkled with sloops, and bounded in the blue distance by a faintly descried outline of elevated land, lay before me, encircling the peninsular landscape in front like a crescent, and extending on the right far out into the boundless ocean. On the other side the scene was embraced in an amphitheatre of mountains. The plain on which stood the scattered houses seemed directly beneath, with patches of woodland, clusters of pine cones, presenting a curious appearance as one looked from above into those compact groves, small inlets and a river flashing in the sun, and an extended map of farms, meadows and forest. Just below were two or three large tents of a traveling circus, drawing streams of the small population from the village, the music now and then floating upward in softened strains; and directly overhead was the bare and rocky mountain side, terminating in a conelike peak, on which a few straggling and blasted pines stretched their white denuded limbs into the sky. Thence a view may be had including seven or eight towns, and a circuit of many miles, with distant mountain ranges, a number of lakes in their depths, gleaming blue and bright amid the dark foliage.

Descending to the plain with difficulty, and sliding down the boulders, we took our lunch under the grateful shade, fanned by the seabreeze, and prepared for further travel. "You have not seen yet best scenery yet," said our old friend, the farmer; "You must go through the turnpike." So we drove around the mountain, which now frowned grimly in apparently inaccessible grandeur—(passing the circus—where some excitement was being produced by a venal father's selling his daughter, a beautiful little girl, to go with the company as a dancer)—and on for some two miles, entering the heart of the rock-ribbed hills. At the top of a formidable looking descent we alighted, and leaving our steed and carriage, walked on through the woods. We now entered a wild mountain gorge resembling the Delaware Water-gap, and scarcely inferior in impressive loveliness. At length, emerging from the woods, a magnificent picture burst upon our sight. A beautiful lake, flashing like a mirror, with several green islands on its clear bosom, lay nestled in the very lap of the mountains. The blue range on the opposite side sloped to the water's brink, richly wooded to the verge; while on the right the cliffs rose gaun and gray-visaged, presenting a bare and blackened surface, like a time-scathed wall bristling over the ravine. The deep forest skirted their base, and filled the valley with delicious shadow. On every side rills were gushing from the gems of the woods, and hastening to fling their tribute into the lake. In one place we found what must have been the bed of a mighty torrent in time past. The path of the vanished river was marked by large boulders swept down the mountain side down which it came with thunderous speed; the interlacing boughs of the luxuriant woods covered it with impervious shade, and from the cavernous hollow made by the moss-grown rocks, rushed a small stream with a noise like a cascade, echoed refreshingly through the still forest scene. It was "a spirit-stealing nook," where many Summer days might be charmingly spent; but we could only linger to sip up some of the delicious water in a rustic cup of birch bark, made by a sea captain of our party, for the day was beginning to wane. The Lake is about a mile in length, and nearly half a mile broad. The road lies close on its bank, shaded by bushes and trees to its extremity, and near this is the village of Lincolnville, from which it is named. Just before the head in the valley which disclosed it, the cliff on the right towers into a majestic peak some 500 feet high, and its stark front peers over the glen like the famed "Maiden's Rock" on the Mississippi. A fleecy, sun-bright cloud sailing above, seemed to rest on the black and barren mass, whose sullen front may have breasted a thousand times the lightning's shafts. The tallest forest trees reach but a short way up its perpendicular sides. Before as was a rustic bridge, and the mountain slope bounded the end of this gem of lakes. We longed to explore the caverns formed by boulders jumbled together, or to rest in the shade on the lake side; but time pressed, and we were fain to walk more rapidly than was agreeable, to regain our vehicle, left more than a mile distant.

We had heard much of a lake in the mountains, named by the Indians "Chickawawkee," from which much of the Rockland ice is obtained; but few of the inhabitants in the neighborhood seemed to know its whereabouts, and though within five miles of Rockland and Thomaston, it seems to be not much visited, and in no manner esteemed "a lion." It goes by the not euphonious name of "Tollman's Pond." After repeated inquiries, which elicited contradictory replies, and not a little wonder whom we intended to call on in that locality, and going a few miles out of our way, we came upon two pretty lakelets, either of which might have deserved the description given of the "pond" we sought; and as it was sunset, we resolved to pursue the road homeward. About two miles further on, we came suddenly in view of a beautiful lake a mile or so long, and a mile broad in its widest part. A pretty high mountain near one end, sent its wooded slope to the water; and its further shores were bold and wooded at intervals. The scenery much resembled that of Canandaigua Lake near its foot, and was quite as romantic. The approach of a storm made it more picturesque. Huge masses of vapor, driven up from the northwest, hung like a heavy curtain, rent anon by flashes of lightning, over one end of the lake, wrapping it in dense shadows while the sunlight played on its further extremity; the wind lifted this dark drapery in gray folds over the mountains, and I thought even the land of the glaciers could not furnish a scene of wilder beauty. We sought shelter at another neat homestead on the bank, and were hospitably received, till the passing of the storm enabled us to resume our journey.

I now take leave of this lovely region, most favorably impressed with the genial kindness and general intelligence of the residents of Maine, notwithstanding solitary instances like that of a gentleman of Bangor, connected with a literary institution, who complained with some indignation that a note written in the third person by a stranger, and addressed to him, bore no signature! R. SEA VIEW HOUSE, HIGHLANDS OF NAVESINK, Thursday, July 26, 1855.

How the dog star rages, and has raged in your busy City, you know full well, Mr. Editor. How the hot sun has poured down upon your head daggings—how that scorching heat has been reflected back from the endless avenues of brick and mortar through which your melting, sweltering townsmen have to wend their ways—how long, hot days have been succeeded by hotter nights,—all these have been the theme and the complaint of the seven or eight hundred thousand mortals that have an existence within the narrow confines of Manhattan Island. Until a fortnight since I was myself a part and parcel of that seething mass—was a sweltering, roasted, troubled, and agonizing dweller in Gotham. I endured until endurance ceased to be a virtue. Through the first week of those heated terms, I found comfort in the diurnal study of your pictures of the serene and purified existence whereof others had a realization in the distance far away. But a week's reading of MINNIE MYRTLE's genial, quiet etchings of the enjoyments she could find amid the fashion and frivolities of Saratoga,—Q. Q.'s gossip of its more marked and masculine mannerisms,—INTERMITTENT's laudations of the mountain breeze from Sharon, and the even more refined and rarefied airs of its distingué habitans,—E. F. E.'s outlines, limned amid the hills and valleys of Maine,—CANONICUS's sketches of the beakers and breakers of Newport,—and H. J. R.'s quaint, random notes of a week in the Northern wilds, had so raised within me the thirst for roaming, that I inwardly resolved that I would have at least one dash at rusticating—that I would overhaul, myself, the ways and habits of the outer world, that appeared to be getting along so clever and joyously beyond the jurisdiction of the Mayor and Commonality,—I would forget for a month the fluctuations in breadstuffs, the siege of Sebastopol, the rise and fall of domestics, and the prices of stocks,—would bury in my old desk all recollections of Wall and Pearl and Broadway, and thereabouts, by making a running effort for exemption from business pursuits.

Where there's a will there's a way. I had enough, and to spare, of the will—the way was not so abundant—the means not at all superfluous. The wind is tempered to the shorn lamb, so I must temper my wanderings by the shorn profits that cut so slight a figure on the right margin of my ledger. Nothing in Euclid was half so clear as that, and so I betook me to the guides to guide me on my way, and gave heed to the "Summer Retreats" whereof the advertising columns of the TIMES make proper mention. There was Newport, and Saratoga, and Sharon, and Trenton, and Niagara, and the White Mountains, and the Northern Lakes, and far away the boundless prairies—but for the wants, and the habits, and the capacities of a new beginner, all these were not. I must make my first flight within a narrowed circuit, or like the undedged bird I should be lost forever.

The shores of the Sound, the banks of the Hudson, or at farthest the sea-coast of the Jerseys, must be the length and breadth of my offending. Short time and a narrow range for choosing, speedily brought certainty out of uncertainty.

"The sea, the sea, the boundless sea,
The blue, the fresh, the ever free," should charm me with its music, awe me with its roar, refresh me with rich, balmy breath. A timely notice in the TIMES, promising a rare combination of mountain scenery, a boundless range of surf and river bathing, and withal good shelter, for the Sea View, on the Highlands of Navesink, settled my last doubt. I had a dim remembrance of the Navesink, as has probably every other New-Yorker, and had somehow cherished therewith an indistinct notion that it was the great stereotype whereform upon all our hostelry pouches, our bunches of dusty radishes and early turnips, our long, green, unbroken watermelons, with their chaste, the range, great-eyed, round-ribbed little nutmegs—and that all these were the product of the wonderful care and patient toil of many a natural and robust farmer, who had inherited their delicacy, their substance and their rotundity from the old Dutch stock whereby the Jerseys were originally peopled. Visions of all these in their full freshness came fragrantly across me as I embarked on the steamer Ocean Wave, that promised in two hours to land me at my hoped-for haven safe and in good condition, "the dangers of the seas excepted." Time and tide wait for none, but the Wave does wait for tide and time. When both served her purpose she gently glided out from the long pier at Jay-street, picked her dubious way through the forest of shipping that studded the upper bay, hugged close to "old Long Island's sea-girt shore," until she had passed through the Narrows and gained the open waters of the lower bay, and then west, southwest, for the intricate windings of Shrewsbury inlet. Amid the scenery of the route thus indexed—and the innumerable vessels that are going down and coming up from the great deep beyond—two hours seem but a brief lapse of time, and so pleasantly passed the panorama of commerce and agriculture before me, that "all ashore for the Highlands" was sounded before I had fairly realized my flight from the boundless continuity of brick rows that had so many years encompassed me about. Perhaps there were other reasons for this speedy flight of time—this unnoticed passage over the waters. Perhaps within a looking distance of a near-visioned mortal, there was

"A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records—promises as sweet;
A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears and smiles."

But of these, more anon. Of our quiet walks over the beach, "that ladye faire and I," those dreamy moonlight evenings—of what she has told me now and then of terrible shipwrecks when the rude blasts of Winter lash into fury the wide waste of waters that now sparkle and glimmer in the noon-day sun like a broad sheet of melted gold—of the fleet of ships that pass daily to and fro—of the lighthouse and the light that glimmers through the chamber windows of the cottage where I write—of the legends that cluster thick around the rugged mountains of the Highlands,—of all these, as time serves and opportunity prompts, I hope to make mention. But now the wind is fair and the black eyes invite me to a sail—who could resist such a combination? Not LEO.

A Trip to Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Saturday, July 14, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Acting upon the impression which I have generally found to be true, that what interests one person will perhaps interest many, I have ventured to jot down a few things which I have seen in a most varied and pleasant trip to this most remarkable and most beautiful city.

In company with an old and esteemed friend, I left New-York on Friday morning, in the New-York and Erie Railroad Express Train for Dunkirk. As I shall have something to say elsewhere of the details of that journey—of the magnificent scenery which we passed through—of the crops which were awaiting the sickle—of the miles and miles of lumber which we passed on our way to Lake Erie, etc.; of these I shall speak hereafter.

For the present, let it suffice to say, that we arrived at Dunkirk,—four hundred and sixty miles, at not a late hour in the night—it lacked something of 12 o'clock—and at the precise moment prescribed by the "time-tables," which embrace that whole distance! Think of that, you some-time stage-coach travelers through the central portion of our State!

Well—after a quarter of an hour, in which we took a sandwich and a piece of well-baked apple-pie, we entered the cars of the South-Shore Lake Railroad for Cleveland. We arrived at that beautiful and flourishing city at a little after 5 o'clock in the morning. I awoke from my "catnap" in the cars a little before 4 o'clock. The still waters of Erie, tinted with the light which heralded the advancing sun, looked so much like the sky itself, that I didn't observe that we were close by the lake, whose rim was

"—— like the wide ocean,
Girdled by the sky."

But then we were within ten miles of Cleveland,—upon that level lake plateau, than which nothing could be more beautiful. Everywhere on the right, (as we gazed "sleepingly" out of the morning cars,) stretched toward the green waters of the lake fields wide, and long, and rank in growth of wheat, and corn, and oats. OATS! If there should be a horse in Ohio, hereafter, with uncovered ribs, hold no converse with his owner!

Arrived at Cleveland, we found ourselves, after a hasty breakfast, on board the cars of the Cincinnati and Cleveland Railroad, as far as Shelby; passing a region of country which requires only careful cultivation and "clearing up" to be second to none in the State.

At Shelby we changed cars for those of the Mansfield and Sandusky Railroad, which soon conveyed us to Newark, a large and flourishing town, whence we took private conveyances to Somerset, Perry County, a rich and fertile agricultural region, and full of iron and coal mines of the richest description, and more approachable for mining purposes than any other in the United States. As I visited these several mines in person, and examined them with the most careful attention, you will perhaps permit me to describe their character and situation to your readers.

But first let me mention the means by which these surpassingly rich treasures from the bowels of the earth are to be made accessible to the public. The Scioto and Hocking Valley Railroad, when completed, will be the medium by which all this will be accomplished. This road, of which Messrs. SILAS SEYMOUR, MOORE & Co. are the energetic contractors, runs from Newark to Portsmouth, on the Ohio River. Forty-four miles, from Portsmouth to Jackson, are already completed, and doing a very large and paying business, in transporting the pig-iron which is made from the abundant iron ore, of the best quality, found at different places along the line of the road—at its upper half, especially. The ninety miles of this road, now under construction, are far advanced—and will, when completed, do an extensive business in transporting coal and iron, and the abounding agricultural productions, which are the wonder and admiration of the traveler along every mile of the route. The road passes through the flourishing villages of Somerset, Logan and M'Arthur, the county-seats of Perry, Logan and Vinton—the very best of the mineral region of Ohio. It connects at Newark with the Mansfield and Sandusky Railroad, running from Newark to Sandusky City and Lake Erie—a distance of 126 miles—and also at the same place with the Zanesville and Columbus Railroad, and at Shelby with the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad. Moreover, it connects at M'Arthur with the Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad, and at Jackson with the Hillsborough and Cincinnati Railroad.

Such are the connections and such the road that will open to the use of thousands upon thousands, hereafter, the mineral riches that now sleep undisturbed in the beds of ore and coal of a thousand hills—hills, too, of easy slope, and, unlike other mining regions, not unapproachable, but with all their treasures below, covered with fertile soil, and waving with luxuriant crops of corn and wheat and oats on their very summits.

Of the towns here, it is hardly necessary to speak. Blair Tomlinson, of the most solid architecture, constructed of brave stone, are built and building in all the coloured copper. Iron doors, 16 high and broad beside, are seen all along the line; and pig-iron piled up like the long piles of cord-wood for railways, is seen upon the sides of the roads, and crowding the available spaces about the depots. The iron is literally inexhaustible, and pronounced by the best practical iron-workers to be of the very richest quality—in the words of one of the most extensive, being "worth five dollars more per ton than any other pig-iron brought to the market at Pittsburg."

The coal mines are wonderful. That is certainly the least that can be said of them. Although I saw several mines—in fact, they are to be seen in all directions, "cropping out," as it is called, from the easy slopes of entirely accessible hills—I visited but one, which was at Straitsville, in the County of Perry. I shall endeavor to describe it to you, and the description of this one will answer for all in its immediate neighborhood, which present the same general characteristics.

The vein of the Straitsville mine is on the side of a high hill, of a gradual slope approached by a good road, with a slight descending grade. The mine opens on a level with the road, and you enter it as easily as you could go in at the door of a house. We took candles, and penetrated the mine some three hundred feet. For twelve feet up and down, on both sides, is the first extraordinary view of the most beautiful coal I ever "set eyes on." The magnitude of the deposit is wonderful; for beneath this vein there is another of kindred extent, containing the same kind of coal. It quarries in blocks that are positively handsome to look at. Take a sharp one, or knife, and it will split like a piece of pine into long pieces; and you hold one of them in the flame of a candle and it takes fire instantly, and it burns with a bright blaze, like a pine torch! And so clean is it that you may rub a cambric handkerchief upon the split pieces, and it will not soil it in the least. It makes the very best of coke for making iron, being superior, in the proper qualities, to charcoal, as two to one. It is estimated from actual survey, by experienced and practical miners, that there are eighteen thousand tons to the acre in one tract of this coal region, equal to an amount of twelve millions three hundred and seventy-five thousand tons!

But I am making my letter quite too long. Let it suffice to say, that after crossing Eastern Ohio, amidst superabounding agricultural and mineral fertility, we arrived "by rail" at Portsmouth, on the Ohio River, four hundred miles from Pittsburg, and one hundred and twenty from Cincinnati, for which latter place we took boat, and here we are.

What a wonderful place in Cincinnati! Distrust nothing that is told you of it, for its marvelous extent and astonishing New-Yorkness can scarcely be exaggerated. In its streets of tall, wide, and architecturally distingué buildings, believe me, it has not its equal out of New-York, that I have ever seen. Its numerous public buildings, also, are in keeping with all this.

One of the largest, most symmetrical, most architecturally beautiful hotels in this country, is the "Burnett House," of which Mr. A. B. COLEMAN, (a brother of our friend of the best hotel in New-York,) is the proprietor. It is larger than the Astor House; its dining halls are more extensive, its general halls are wider, its rooms larger and more numerous, its marble floors, and tiled halls, and pillared bar and reading rooms of superior dimensions; its fitting up, in furniture, &c., is rich in the extreme, without a particle of gaudiness in any portion of the vast edifice. As I shall have something more to say of this hereafter, I "dry up" for the present.

I have been down the Ohio to Louisville; I have been in "Good old Kentucky"—I have seen much of its society, for a short sojourn; I have been in Indiana, with an eye as open as any man's can be, riding on an engine or in the open baggage-car, where one can see something; and of what I saw and heard, I hope to say something more in detail in the September number of the "OLD KNICK."

Hamilton College—Its History—Recent Commencement, &c.

CLINTON, N. Y., Monday, July 30, 1855.

Before giving an account of the Commencement exercises at this College, it may be well enough to correct an error which has crept into Harper's Gazetteer. Under the article "Clinton," it is said "this village is the seat of Madison University, formerly Hamilton College, now under the control of the Baptists, formerly of the Presbyterians." Then follow the statistics appropriate to Madison University. Now the graduates and friends of Hamilton College would not think of claiming the honor which belongs to their Baptist neighbor, a much younger, yet highly respectable institution, the neighboring village of Hamilton. We presume our friend HARPER would not think of claiming to be either the owner or manager of Harper's Ferry. Certainly he ought not to be sympathized with as the "Blind Harper." That would be as absurd as to really believe that Dr. WARREN was the inventor of "Warren's Blacking," the author of Ten Thousand a Year, and died at Bunker's Hill. But really this confusion of names which is common in this country, ought not to extend to our literary institutions. Hamilton College is at Clinton, Oneida County, N. Y. Was founded in 1810. Its original founder, when an Academy, was SAMUEL KIRKLAND, the famous Missionary to the Oneidas, and the friend of SHENANDOAH. It was named Hamilton by its early Trustees, who were among the strong Federalists of central New-York, and were the especial admirers of ALEX. HAMILTON. HAMILTON himself contributed largely to the funds of the Academy. Its corner-stone was laid with great parade by Baron STEUBEN. Its first President was the venerable Dr. AZEL BACKUS, so famous in Connecticut as the leader of THOS. JEFFERSON, and who, when arrested at Bethlem, rode on to Hartford before the Sheriff so fast that the officer cried out, "You ride as if the Devil was after you." Looking behind him, the orator replied, "He is." Dr. BACKUS was a man of whom it has perhaps been somewhat coarsely said, "He was as big as a hogshead, and full of emotion."

Its successive Presidents have been Drs. HENRY DAVIS, DWIGHT, PERRY and NORTH, all of them men of ability and scholarship. Its Alumni number 1,108, many of them eminent for scholarship and usefulness. Rev. Dr. EDWARD ROBINSON, of New-York, and ALBERT BARNES, of Philadelphia, need no eulogy.

Although, by the terms of its charter, it is expressly provided that no question of religious faith shall determine the election of its officers, yet the College, from its foundation, has been Calvinistic, and its officers have been mostly of the Presbyterian faith. Certainly Genesis has not been the sine qua non of its religious character. We venture to say that no literary institution in this country has a more beautiful location. It commands a prospect of more than fifty miles of the most cultivated portions of central New-York.

Its mineralogical collection is much the most extensive in this State. Its libraries number 11,000 volumes. A gymnasium, and a laboratory, with all the modern improvements, have recently been erected. An observatory building is nearly completed. The telescope, now making by Messrs. SPENCER & EATON, will be the first equatorial made in this country, and will be one of the largest in the world. The grounds about the College have recently been much improved by walks and trees, and will be still further beautified. Hamilton College finds enough in its history and its present great prosperity to shine the patronage of the State, and to increase the attachment of its Alumni. It is too bad to impose upon the friends of Madison University, at Hamilton, the burden of sustaining the appearance of an institution like Hamilton College, at Clinton.

As to the recent Commencement, the inaugural address by Prof. GUYOT, on Sunday afternoon, exhibited, in what might be called, without exaggeration, a masterly style, the necessity of a religious education permeating and vivifying all our physical, intellectual and moral development. The doctrine was illustrated with great learning, from the history of philosophy in all times. The address was one of great refinement of thought and logical power.

Rev. HENRY M. FIELD, of the New-York Evangelist, addressed the Theological Society on Tuesday evening, on "Moral Intrepidity," as the essential of our times. The address was admirable in manner and matter; interesting and useful.

The Prize Declamation, on Monday evening, has never been surpassed, even at this College, so famous for its elocution. The speaking of the young gentlemen was remarkably manly, forcible, graceful.

The prizes were awarded by Hon. JOHN FINE, of Ogdensburg; Prof. WOOTSWORTH, of Albany; and Rev. Dr. CORNIT, of Oswego, to W. W. THOMAS and AUGUSTUS BLAUVELT, Freshmen; A. V. PUTNAM, of New-York; and HERRICK JOHNSON, Buffalo, Sophomores; WM. EMMAN, Reading, Penn.; and C. E. STRESING, Waterford, Sophomore.

The meeting of the Alumni, Hon. ALBERT CLARKE, of New-York, presiding, was addressed by Rev. WM. HAGUE, D. D., of Albany, on the Relations of Politics and Christianity. The Doctor is evidently no high churchman in his politics or creed. He believes if our parties are not managed by the saints, they will be by the sinners, and we think he is right. His address was exceedingly well received, as it deserved to be. The Poem, by Rev. B. W. DWIGHT, of Brooklyn, gave evidence of considerable poetic talent, which if developed will lead the author into the higher regions of Parnassus, we hope and believe.

Hon. JOHN FINE, of Ogdensburg, addressed the Literary Societies Tuesday evening, on the Life and Character of Lord BACON. The Judge spoke without a manuscript, "just on the boys do" upon the stage. His manly form, his venerable head, and his graceful action, gave much interest to this address. It was a very finished performance in every respect—considering Lord BACON as a man, as a politician, lawyer and philosopher. We cannot speak too highly of the Poem by FRANCIS M. FINCH, of Ithaca. It was as rich as jewels and gold; full of most exquisite pictures—some of them worthy of KEATS or SHELLEY. We do hope the gifted author will not smother the flowers of poetry beneath the dust of legal lore.

The occasions of Commencement Day should not be spoken of as College Commencements usually are; those who heard them were not merely pleased with them as indicating promise, but delighted and profited. The literary culture, the maturity of thought, and the self-possession of the young men, we have never seen equaled. The valedictory oration was by S. WALKER SPONSLER, of Moulins, on the "Narrowness of Human Knowledge."

The CLARKE Rhetorical Prize was given to JOHN E. BURNS, of Friendsville, Pa.

The Early Days of Hon. Edward Everett.

At the Sixty-sixth Annual School Festival which took place in Faneuil Hall, Boston, on Monday last, Hon. EDWARD EVERETT delivered an address, from which we take the following interesting extracts relative to the educational advantages he enjoyed in early life:

"It was fifty-two years last April since I began, at the age of nine years, to attend the reading and writing schools in Boston, Dorchester-street. The reading school was under Master LEWIS, (for Young America had not yet repudiated that title,) and the writing school was kept by Master THOMPSON. Master LITTLE, in spite of his name, was a giant in stature—six feet four, at least—and sometimes wielded to the past. He struggled earnestly against the change then taking place in the pronunciation of u, and insisted on our saying cooncumber and cooter. But I suspend, under his tuition, what was thought in those days a very valuable knowledge of LINDLEY MURRAY's abridgement of English grammar, and at the end of the year could parse almost any sentence in the American Preceptor. Master THOMPSON was a writing master of the old school. He set the copies himself, and taught that beautiful old Boston hand-writing which, if I do not mistake—but, in the march of innovation, (which is not always the same thing as improvement,) been changed very little for the better. Master THOMPSON was advanced in years, and had found a qualification for his calling as a writing master, in what might have seemed at first to threaten to be an obstruction. The fingers of his right hand had been contracted and stiffened in early life, by a burn, but were fixed in just the position to hold a pen and a penknife—and nothing else. As they were also consistently contracted, they served as a convenient instrument of discipline. A copy badly written, or a blotted page, was sometimes visited with an infliction which would have done no discredit to the beak of a bald eagle. His long, deep cleak was a perfect curiosity-shop of confiscated balls, tops, penknives, marbles and jewsharps—the accumulation of forty years. I desire, however, to speak of him with gratitude, for he put me on the track of an acquisition which has been extremely useful to me in after life—that of a plain, legible hand. I remained at those schools about sixteen months, and had the good fortune in 1804, to receive the Franklin medal in the English department. After an interval of about a year, during which I attended a private school kept by Mr. EZEKIEL WEBSTER, of New-Hampshire, (not on occasion of his absence, by his ever memorable brother, DANIEL WEBSTER, at that time a student of law in Boston,) I went to the Latin school, then slowly emerging from a state of extreme depression. It was kept in School-street, where the Revolutionary Hall now stands.

The standard of scholastic attainment was certainly not higher than that of material comfort in those days. We read pretty much the same books—or of the same class—in Latin and Greek, as we read now, but in a very cursory and superficial manner. There was no attention paid to the philology of the language—to the derivation of words from their radical elements—to the question of construction—still less to prosody. I never made a hexameter or pentameter verse, till years afterwards, I had a son at school in London, who occasionally required a little aid in that way. The subsidiary and illustrative branches were wholly unknown in the Latin School in 1805. Such a thing as a school library, a book of reference, a critical edition of a classic, a map, a blank-bound, an engraving of an ancient building, or a copy of a work of ancient art, such as now adorn the walls of our schools, was as little known in the shape of telegraph. If our children, who possess all these appliances and aids to learning, do not greatly surpass their parents, they will be much to blame. At this school in 1806 I had the satisfaction to receive the Franklin medal, which, however, as well as that received at the English school in 1804, during my absence from the country in early life, I was so unfortunate as to lose.

KILLED BY THE CARS.—One of the trains from Rochester for Buffalo, on Saturday, ran over a man near the Chili Station, killing him almost instantly. He was walking along the track on a curve, and was not seen until the engine was near him. After the man was struck and thrown from the track, the train was stopped and backed down to where the mangled body lay. Both legs and one arm were broken, and his body was literally stripped by the engine. The corpse was taken to the Station-house near by, and a coroner was sent for to hold an inquest. Nothing was elicited to show who the man was, and so far as we can learn, his body has not yet been identified. He was about five feet six inches high, of light build, sandy moustache, and dark hair. Only one dollar in money was found upon him, and that in a Michigan bill.

The jury found that deceased "came to his death by injuries received from a locomotive while carelessly walking on the track of the New-York Central Railroad." The unfortunate man was probably a traveler short of funds

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

HARPER'S STORY BOOKS.

Years ago, children's story books, are greatly altered from what they were years ago. At that time what was popularly called "Juvenile books" (meaning, not books about children, but books for youth,) were very prominent for terrors. To be sure there were the Personal Voyage of Wakefield, bold Robinson Crusoe, the capital travels of Rolando the captive, Arabian Nights, and half a dozen others, which charm youth and age alike; but books expressly calculated to instruct while they amused, were few indeed. Miss EDGEWORTH's stories were and are capital, and so was Frank,—there was excellent reading in Scandford and Merton, also,—but the utilitarianism with which these were crammed, was rather repulsive, then attractive.

The great error in children's books of a former day was this—they were written down to the presumed capacity (or incapacity) of youth. Now, any one who is familiar with children knows that, in conversing with them, if there be any one thing particularly distasteful to them, it is the being talked down to. Children are quicker and more acute than grown people generally imagine. Talk to them and write to them as you would talk and write to and for adults with limited education, and you will not then thinking—which is the great point to be gained. To a child of six or seven years old, you would not use such nonsense as the baby talk of "Goosey gosey, shall the ith his steady pasty." The boy or girl would think you foolish. Just as absurd is it, when writing for children of from seven to twelve years old, to address them as if they really were ignorant of the commonest things, until you condescended to take them in hand. Comparatively speaking, a child of ten years is better instructed and has thought more than a man or woman of twenty. This may seem paradoxical, but it is a fact.

Harper's Story Books, of which nine monthly volumes have appeared, strike us as being precisely what young people can read with pleasure and advantage. They consist of tales, narratives, and biographies, each containing 160 pages, with about fifty engravings, well designed and engraved, and carefully printed on excellent paper. JACOB ABBOTT is the author, and certainly has exhibited tact and well as marked ability in the production of a class of books which parents as well as children may read with satisfaction. They are the best children's books ever published. They wisely avoid the introduction or discussion of religious topics, yet are such as Christian parents may unhesitatingly place in their children's hands. Nine volumes have already appeared. Their respective contents are:

1. Rollo; or Lessons of Fidelity, Patience, and Self-control, taught by a Dog.
2. Rollo and the Mortgage; showing how much may be accomplished by a boy.
3. The Straight Gate; or, the Rule of Exclusion from Heaven.
4. The Little Learner; or, the Boys' and Girls' Guide to Truth.
5. Cruel Jim; or, the Pathology of Tricks and Mischief.
6. Truth; or, the Three Misfortunes of a Belle.
7. Paradox; or, a Little Light on a Very Dark Saying.
8. Wishing and Doing; or, the Art of being Useful.
9. Pleasure and Penny; or, the Art of Self-instruction.

The price is marvelously low. Twenty-five cents a number makes it about six pages of print and two excellent engravings for each cent of the money. The engravings alone, without a line of letter-press, would be cheap at the price. One good thing these Story Books will certainly accomplish—henceforth, inferior authorship and used-up, worn-out illustrations cannot be palmed off on children. They have samples here of what is best for them, and they are shrewd enough not to put up with anything of lower quality.

ELLIE; OR, THE HUMAN COMEDY. By JOHN ESTEN COOKE, Author of "The Virginia Comedians," "The Youth of Jefferson," &c. 1 volume, pp. 378. Richmond: J. W. Ryland.

The only one of Mr. ESTEN COOKE's works which we had previously encountered is The Youth of Jefferson, published by REDFIELD, last year, which was written with ease, grace and delicacy, blending wit and sentiment in no scanty measure. Ellie is altogether and essentially of a different class. It is a romance of real life, in which not only incident but character is involved—the adventures being such as really might have occurred, and the characters, whether original or not, being well developed, well sustained, and true to human nature. Mr. COOKE has produced a very charming book, worthy alike of the spasmodic, unnatural and exaggerated productions which recent story-tellers have thrown before the world. He gives individuality to each person whom he introduces. There is a dashing editor, with his heart in the right place, whom we should greatly desire to shake hands with. Monsieur Guillemot is as much an original as Monsieur Mallet; and, passing a crowd of others, there are two women who, we know, are actualities—Aurelia, so genial and womanly, and Sylvia, "nobly planned," falling into sin, through pride, and bringing the skill of an actress to baffle and deceive the trusting nature of an honest man. Among the others, Doctor Fossyl stands alone—and natural. He is consistent, all through. So is Wide-Awake, and preëminently so is Aunt Phillis. As for the child-heroine, she is a sweet specimen of her sex, at a most interesting period.

The illustrations, by STROTHER, an artist of considerably ability, are wretchedly engraved and badly worked. They disfigure a book which is very handsomely printed.

GLAUCUS; OR THE WONDERS OF THE SHORE. By CHARLES KINGSLEY, Author of "Alton Locke." 1 vol. 16mo., pp. 186. Boston: TICKNOR & FIELDS.

A delightful book, which will go far in establishing a taste for the study of Natural History. It is written by an English author, respecting whose comparative merits, as poet, romancist and political religionist, the critics are at issue just now. But on this small volume, its object and execution, there cannot be the shadow of a doubt. It is the very book to put into your pocket or reticule, Sir or Madame, as you walk by the seashore in these Summer months, and it will teach you how to use your eyes, exercise your observation, to

"Look thro' Nature up to Nature's God."

Nor is Mr. KINGSLEY content with this teaching, but he winds up with enumerating and describing the few best books on Natural History which will enable you to carry on the study into which he has here initiated you.

A Visit to the Camp before Sevastopol, by RICHARD MCCORMICK, Jr., of New-York, which has just been published by the APPLETONS, is a neat modest, unpretending volume, but we are indebted to it for a clearer idea of the siege of Sebastopol than we have yet derived from more ambitious and voluminous works on the same subject. The author describes what he saw, and writes clearly and well. His text is illustrated with several engravings, the most interesting of which is a portrait of FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, (from the picture in London,) and the most valuable are panoramic views of the seat of war in the East, and the position of the armies before and in Sebastopol.

The Artist and Tradesman's Companion, by Dr. LAFAYETTE BURR, is a small volume with almost a cyclopædic range of subjects. Varnish-making and painting, enameling and glazing, metal gilding and marbling, fancy-wood painting, and so on, are knowingly treated of. It is as full of information as an egg is of meat. Published by C. Sherman.

An Exposition of the Church of Christ and its Doctrine, is a supplement by JOHN J. WHITE, to a work by Bishop MILNER's Rest of Religious Controversy. It is written in a fair spirit of inquiry and with good temper. LIPPINCOTT, GRAMBO & Co., Philadelphia.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Farmers' Club.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your issue of Thursday, I noticed an article on the "Farmers' Club" of the American Institute, copied from the Buffalo Commercial, which appears to be based on mistaken notions of the nature of this Association.

This Club is composed of farmers who meet at the rooms of the American Institute, No. 351 Broadway, on the first and third Tuesdays of every month, at 12 o'clock, M. During the Spring months it meets at the same hour on every Tuesday for the interchange and distribution of seeds. These meetings are conversational in their character, and free to any gentlemen who will communicate something of general interest. It is true, that some gentlemen in this City, who are not at present engaged in the practice of agriculture, but who yet retain a love for early associations, and who look forward to and anticipate with impatience the day when they may again return to the country and to rural pursuits, have whiled away an hour a week at these meetings, and it is very probable that they have said some things that in the progress of time will prove to have been only scaffolding around that structure, which shall eventually endure. Still we do not see how we are to progress in the dark if we may not be allowed to grope. We are searching for the truth; perhaps the Buffalo Commercial would, for a sufficient consideration, tell us where it is.

The meetings of this Club are open to all; the American Institute allowing its rooms for the purpose. It is not necessary even to become a member of the Institute in order to enjoy the privileges of this Club, and there is no manner of excuse for the allegation that it is a "close corporation," and I can only account for this assertion by supposing that the writer of the article alluded to has confound the Farmers' Club with the American Institute.

That part of the daily Press that has most country circulation has been in the habit of sending reporters to these meetings, to gather such matters as were of sufficient interest to warrant publication. These reports are generally unauthorized by the gentlemen whom they represent, and are, of course, imperfect. A small part only can be given of the matters brought up, and sometimes the selections made for the public have not been such as gave a fair representation of the Club: but the reporters have always been welcome and have taken what they chose. The only authentic reports are to be found in the annual volumes of the Transactions.

The Secretary of the American Institute (Judge MEIGS) acts also as Secretary of the Farmers' Club, and is a gentleman remarkably adapted to unite the various interests of which such an organization must be composed. He certainly has the welfare of American Agriculture at heart, and in devoting the closing years of a long and honored life to its advancement. His western sun still burns as clear and bright and warm as at meridian, and any implication of imbecility will be quite lost on those acquainted with him. I do not know of any reason for this witless attack on his protegé, and I do not see what purpose is to be subserved by inflicting on him this cruelty.

We are not aware that any of the gentlemen who are in the habit of furnishing matter for these meetings, have ever received the smallest remuneration for their time and trouble spent in this way, or expect to receive any. As to the value of such services to the public, I must be allowed to differ from the Buffalo gentleman, "de gustibus non disputandum," and I am encouraged thus to differ, by the fact that the average attendance at the meetings has steadily increased, until it is now greater than that of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, which seldom exceeds thirty members. Letters are daily received furnishing new matter for the discussions, showing that the reports, imperfect as they are, are very generally read, and that farmers are not so cynical as the Western editor; that we are men like other men, and are interested in what concerns our common humanity.

It is true that it is always easier to destroy than to construct, and that second-rate men are apt to take pleasure in the exercise of this animal instinct; but aside from this, I cannot see what purpose is to be subserved anywhere, but least of all in this City, by the destruction of the Farmers' Club, even if it could be effected.

A PRACTICAL FARMER OF THE CLUB.

Floating Docks in the East River.

The Special Committee of the Board of Aldermen, appointed to investigate into the matter of alleged obstruction to the slip between Piers Nos. 36 and 37 East River—by the Floating Dock, introduced there—met yesterday afternoon. Present—Alderman FOX, (Chairman) KELLY, BAIRD and WILLIAM TUCKER.

Mr. JOHN HECKER, doing business in the vicinity of the Slip in question, testified at considerable length, as to the obstruction occasioned by the Floating Dock. He received a boat-load or more of wheat daily in the course of his own business, and was troubled to get a dock berth for vessels, and had to employ men exclusively for that purpose. The dock, besides being an injury to his own business, was a detriment to commerce generally. It was impossible to get a slip without first feeing the Dock Master or Harbor Master. He had had to stop his mills because he could not unload his wheat. It would be more convenient to him to discharge his vessels at the foot of Pike-street. He had never paid a bonus directly to the Dock or Harbor Master; it was done in-dir ctly. He knew it was done by his agents for him. The dock accommodations were contracted in this vicinity at best. He lost yearly on this accont $500. This floating dock was a benefit to workingmen, but an injury to owners of real estate there. Had it not been for this dock, commerce would have extended along up the East River instead of the North River. The Seventh Ward would be a commercial Ward, were it not for this dock. Privileges had been granted by the Common Council to other floating docks, but this he considered in violation of the City Charter. The vessels required in his business were of all sizes. Half were canal boats, and the balance sail vessels, from 250 to 1,000 tons. By the removal of this dock around Corlaers-hook, mechanics of the Seventh Ward would not suffer. Business however, suffered in that locality by their presence.

Wm. DELAMONTAGUE said that he owned property in the vicinity of Market-slip, and carried on his business—that of a boat builder—there. The floating dock was, in his view, an injury to commerce. Were this dock not there large vessels would land and unload produce at the wharf, and make half prove.

DAVID CADDY, of No. 58 Broome-street, next called, stated that he was interested in the dock in question, as a trustee. He thought the dock should be where it could conveniently be accessible by shipping merchants. The present position he considered a good one. In Williamsburg, where it formerly lay, the dock was liable to damage from tide and storm. Parties having vessels repaired, were anxious to examine the progress of the work, and the more convenient getting to them the better for their interests. The expense of a large ship at dock was about $150 daily. This dock he thought would rather facilitate trade than retard it. Vessels from the West Indies, and elsewhere, often come here for purposes of repairs. Three-fourths of the large vessels coming to this port are consigned to the stockholders of this Dock Company. He believed owners, captains and agents of all the vessels and steamships in New-York were in favor of the present location, on account of its convenience and utility. Other places had been looked at, but none could be found superior in advantages to this. As to the delay of getting berths for vessels, this was frequent at all the docks all about the City. He had had vessels delayed in discharge of their cargo often ten days. The fact is, the shipping trade of New-York was too great for the advantages afforded for the reception and exportation of her produce and articles of commerce. But few vessels of wheat, comparatively, are landed in the Seventh Ward. The bulk of it is taken to Coenties-slip. The removal of the dock would not lessen the value of real estate in that vicinity. That the interests of the entire City, he thought, should be consulted in a matter of this importance, and not that of a single Ward.

OWEN C. CRABT gave evidence adverse to the dock. He owned a building in the vicinity, and it was an injury to him at least $1,000 a year. The entire slip would accommodate eight ships.

PETER MCMANNA testified in favor of the dock. Such a dock was needed, and the present was the best locality in the City. Floating docks required greater depth of water than vessels. The water here was deeper than elsewhere, and the pier longer. It was of immense benefit to all classes of ship mechanics. Real estate generally, in his opinion, would suffer by the removal of the dock.

Adjourned at call of the Chairman.

New-York Classis of the Dutch Reformed Church.

The New-York Classis of the Dutch Reformed Church held an adjourned session yesterday forenoon, at the Consistory Rooms in Fulton-street. The object of the session was, more particularly, the examination of students, with a view to licensing them to preach, as well as for the transaction of such other business as may be presented. Rev. C. M. JAMESON presided, Rev. N. J. MARCELLUS acting as Secretary. Proceedings were opened with prayer by the President.

The roll was then called, when the following Representatives announced themselves: Revs. Dr. De Witt, John Knox, C. M. Jameson, J. C. Guldin, C. Whitehead, and N. J. Marcellus, and Elders J. Delamater, A. Van Ness, C. Ancerman, A. Demarest, Furman, H. Vebelage, and Dr. Comstock. (Several other Representatives afterward reported themselves.)

The calls of the various churches were first taken up for disposition, as follows:

FRANZ REINHART, called to the Pastorage of the Third German Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in New-York—salary $600.

THOMAS B. GREGORY, called to the Pastorage of the Reformed Dutch Church of Bloomingview, at Westfield, Staten Island—salary $600.

URIAH MARVIN, called to the Pastorage of the Reformed Dutch Church of Greenwich—salary $1,400 per annum.

Each of the above calls were severally approved and endorsed by the Classis, the particeinterested signifying their acceptance of the call.

The matter of examining Students, with a view to licensing them to preach, if found competent, (the special business of the day,) was then taken up.

Dismissals from the Classis of New-Brunswick, N. J., to that of New-York, were then presented by Messrs. EZEKIEL C. SCUDDER and JARED W. SCUDDER.

Rev. Dr. DEWITT remarked that the two gentlemen named above were desirous of being examined, with a view to their ordination as Missionaries to India, in which field of labor they already have a brother.

Certificates were also presented by FRANZ REINHART SCHROEDER, F. ZABRISKIE, and F. F. SCHNELLEN DRUESSELN, as graduates of the Theological Seminary.

The examination was then proceeded with, the candidates being rehearsed in Latin and Hebrew, and as to their general information on religious subjects.

In each case the candidate passed his examination satisfactorily, and all the above named were duly licensed for the ministry.

Reports of Committees were next called for. The Committee on Overtures presented a report, recommending the admission of FRANCIS ZASTERON, a Bohemian, to the ministry. [This gentleman, it appeared from the Committee's report, was formerly a Roman Catholic priest, acting as a traveling missionary for that Church in Bohemia, where, having renounced the Catholic faith and embraced the Dutch Reformed Church, he was thrown into prison, from which he afterwards escaped, and has now arrived here, and is seeking a charge of the character of his new profession.] The Committee's report was adopted, and ZASTERON admitted to preach.

The same Committee also suggested that the Classis recommend to the Board of Education of the Seminary FREDERICK W. A. REIDEL, as a fitting person to be aided in pursuing his theological studies. The Committee's suggestion was agreed to.

The Committee then adjourned.

The Tenth Ward K. N's—The President Down on the Daily Times—Threatens a Libel Suit—Hon. Joseph H. Petty, of the Thirteenth, Speaks a Speech—The Grand Mogul Repudiated.

As usual, our reporter visited the Brothers, at the corner of Grand and Ludlow streets, on Saturday evening, and found but few of the Tenth Ward members present; though quite a number were there from other Councils, who had been attracted by the reports in the DAILY TIMES. Among the guests was Hon. JOSEPH H. PETTY, of the Thirteenth Ward, and who is a member of the Whig Committee, which meets at the Broadway House, and is a Brother of the Whig of the Tenth Ward, who was expelled from Council No. 5 for being a Whig. Also, Hon. Mr. BARNOW, of the Seventh Ward, and a member of the same Council with the Grand Mogul, Brother W. B——n. At the appointed hour, the President, Brother J. T. B——s, called the meeting to order. After the minutes had been read and approved, and the candidates balloted for, the Marshal was dispatched to the ante-room to bring them in. He soon returned with the joyful report that there were "two of them" in waiting. A Brother remarked privately—in the hearing of our reporter—that Council No. 5 was bound not to be caught again without a candidate, and that they would see to it that the necessity should not again occur in which a candidate would have to be sent for. The reporter was surprised that of all the one hundred and upwards who are elected and not initiated, it has become necessary to resort to strategem to get a member or two for initiation. After initiation the hat passed around, and as the sum contributed was not publicly announced, our reporter was obliged to apply to the President, Brother J. T. B——s, who kindly informed him that the sum of six shillings and nine cents was added to the Treasury. The expenses of Council, No. 5 being about $4 per week, (not including the unpaid debts of last Fall election,) our reporter was entirely in the fog as to how it was expected to meet the deficiency. On asking the question, P——y B——n, for an explanation, he learned that it would be easily arranged, as the candidates would soon be put in nominations, and their voluntary contributions would be ample to meet all demands.

The Oracle then called up the subject of reinstating the expelled Whigs, and moved its postponement until December next. The motion prevailed.

This subject having been postponed indefinitely, as the Oracle might have known by reading the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, or by consulting the minutes of the Secretary, (if kept correctly,) our reporter could not see the necessity of again bringing up a matter which had caused so much trouble in Council No. 5, and which, it is feared, will sooner or later be the cause of its entire dissolution.

The Delegates to the Convention were instructed to vote for the appointment of an installing deputy for each Assembly District in the City and County of New-York. It may appear strange to outsiders that a delegation, after having been appointed a week, and after having attended one session of the Convention to which it was delegated, should come back for instructions; but such is not only usually in Council No. 5, but also in nearly all the Councils in the City. The haste and fury of members make such contusion, that little is known of what is transacted in the Convention. It is hoped that when the great Convention assembles, there will be some one who is there for, and by, somebody besides himself. If the delegates would only go to their respective Councils and find what they want from home, it would be better.

In the course of the evening Brother J. T. B——s, the President, took occasion to address himself directly to the Reporter of the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES. He called him "a black-hearted villain," and various other epithets of like tender character. He further stated that unless the Reporter ceased to report his acts, and the acts of Council No. 5, he would prosecute him, and all the proprietors of the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, to the extent of the law. He informed the reporters, that the proprietors of that paper had already been addressed to the same effect, and that he had secretly engaged the services of four state bailed sentinels, who were already on the track of Mr. Reporter. "If I can catch," said the President, his eye kindling with American fire, "I won't be responsible for the size of the high-binders I have hired." He then mellowed down into the pathetic, and, with quivering lip, mentioned one, and solemn voice, seriously made inquiries of the reporter. "How," said he, "would you feel when brought before a court in presence of me and Mr. B——n, and the rest of us Know-Nothings?" On the whole his speech was a singular compound of wrath and whining. Not one who think for themselves slumped after his speech before he manifested his usual courtesy to our Reporter.

Brother BARNOW made a few remarks. He said thoroughly and plainly that he disapproved the action of the New-York Delegation at Philadelphia; and that in his opinion the order of in the State of New-York could not stand on the National platform.

The sentiment of Mr. BARNOW was rank treason to Council No. 5. Such ideas had never before been uttered there; and coming as they did from a member of the Seventh Ward Council, where the great Mogul belongs, sent the Brothers by surprise. Mr. BARNOW spoke doubtless the sentiments of the Seventh Ward Council, as is shown by the fact that notwithstanding the most labored exertions, all efforts to ratify the National platform there have failed.

Hon. JOSEPH H. PETTY, member of Assembly from the Thirteenth Ward, next spoke. His remarks were intended to show up his herculean labors of last Winter, and from his own showing were about as useful to the country as his literary efforts with reference to the man "BILLENWARD."

The Secretary, Bro C——n,—a zealous Know-Nothing—a true American, a faithful follower of the oracle, and valiant delegate to Albany to present the election of WILLIAM H. SEWARD,—resigned his office, and positively refused longer to act as Secretary. He gave no reason publicly, but he remarked aside that he was disgusted with the recent acts of Council No. 5—that he had stood it as long as he could.

Our Reporter, through the kindness of P——y B——n, and for which he is exceedingly grateful, was allowed an inspection of the book in which names of proposed candidates for membership are recorded. There are several which will, from time to time claim his notice. Among them is D——y E——n, the candidate on one of the Democratic tickets in 1853 for Alderman. Mr. E——y had best hurry up for initiation. He can learn of Bro. S. C. S——n, that a mere initiation don't hurt anybody—not even a Democratic connexion. Probably Bro. E——n will deny membership; but this is only to throw dust in the eyes of his Tammany friends.

No action was taken in the case of Dr. A. L. W——g. It was whispered around that the Committee dared not call on the Doctor, after the DAILY TIMES had forewarned him of the trick that the little regalia man was playing upon him.

The Council broke up in good season, and the brothers departed in peace.

Police News.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY.

At an early hour yesterday morning, as Mr. Bohl, of West Forty-first-street, was sitting at his window, he observed one Clauskofer, a German, aged 20, describing himself as a clerk, attempt to enter the house of Mr. Bohrman, No. 127 West Forty-first-street, by climbing on the shed over the store door, (having his shoes off.) Failing in this entry over the wall into the second story window, he descended and tried the iron bar which secured the shutters, two of which shutters he succeeded in removing. At this time Mr. Bohl gave the alarm, which hearing, the burglar ran off in the direction of the Ninth-avenue, closely followed by officer Chase, who overtook and captured him in Fortieth street, near the Ninth-avenue. On searching the prisoner, a knife, such as is used by butchers, was found on his person. The prisoner was held for examination.

BURGLARS COMMITTED.

Andrew McFall, a native of this City, 19 years of age, and Andrew Curtis, of this City, aged 21, book-keeper at Broadway Theatre, arrested for an alleged burglary, had a hearing. Antice D. Hartman deposed to the burglarious entry into the premises, No. 73 East Fourteenth-street, by opening the fanlight over the front door, when a quantity of jewelry, to the value of $600 was stolen. He identified much of the property found at the residence of McFall; other of the stolen goods were found publicly exposed for sale in the window of one Frombep, at No. 21 Roosevelt-street, who declared that he received the same from Andrew Curtis. In answer to questions on examination, Curtis owned to the sale of the goods as above, but declares that he did not know whence they came; he declined to answer as to the party from whom he received them. Held to answer in default of $2,000 bail.

HOTEL THIEF.

A man who refused to give any other particulars as to his identity further than the name Charles H. Otis, was, yesterday noon, arrested by officer Hope, of the Mayor's Office, as a hotel thief. The actions of prisoner, on Monday, raised suspicions as to his true character, and yesterday he was closely watched. He yesterday visited the Claremont House, where, after sitting for some time in the ladies' parlor, he made a pretty extensive round of the chambers up stairs, opening several doors by the aid of a pair of nippers. After some time, he got into a room where was the chambermaid, who, on seeing him, screamed out. Prisoner then tried to escape, but was tripped up and secured by the officer, who was behind him. Thus, he was not caught in the performance of any actual theft. *On his person was found the nippers, with twenty-*seven trunk-keys, which would open nearly every trunk-lock that might come in his way; also some jewelry marked M. M. He was taken before Justice Osborne, who held him for examination, which will be had to-day.

STABBING CASE.

A "muss" was got up, at a late hour on Monday night, in Mulberry-street, between Anson Smith, a German shoemaker, and Michael Hart, of No. 206 Elm-street, about some females, during which Smith got outrageous and drew a knife, with which he inflicted a wound of a dangerous nature by stabbing Hart. The injured man was taken to his residence, attended by a physician, who has doubts of his recovery. Policeman McBride, of the Fourteenth District, arrested the assailant, who was committed to await the result of the injuries, by Justice Brennan.

COW BAY ARRESTS.

Officer Baker, of the Sixth Ward, on Monday evening succeeded in arresting the following residents of this place: Matilda Green, Mary Mooney, Nancy Dunn, Mary Ann White, Margaret and Ellen McGall, Mary Commefort, Bridget Loughlin, Mary Ann McCormick, Elizabeth Gorman, and Margaret Downer. The charge against them was made by Mr. Pease of the Mission. They were sent to the Island for six months under the vagrant act.

Reeder's Removal.

President Pierce is receiving the usual and the just reward of a base act, perpetrated in a cowardly and contemptible manner. If he had removed Governor Reeder when the charge of unlawfully speculating in the Public Lands was first made against him, he might have secured credit for acting under a sense of public duty and for the purpose of protecting the public property. If he had removed him when he first found that he would not make himself the supple tool of the armed mob that invaded Kansas for the purpose of forcing Slavery upon the Territory, he would have been seriously supported by the champions of the Slave interest, however hotly and justly he might have been denounced by every lover of freedom and of popular rights. But his vacillating—his halting timidity of purpose, and the fact that he finally resorted to false pretences, as a cloak for an unjust act, have destroyed all respect for his conduct, even in those quarters, for whose interest and at whose dictation it has been pursued. The apologists for Slavery throughout the North, are the loudest in their denunciations of the course the President has seen fit to take. The Albany Argus regrets it; the Buffalo Commercial denounces it; and even the Journal of Commerce, which rarely sticks at any enormity perpetrated on behalf of Slavery, deprecates the removal of Governor Reeder at this particular time, and under the circumstances of the case.

For our own part we are not able to perceive the wisdom of the course which Gov. Reeder has seen fit to pursue. Theoretically right in nearly all his opinions, his action has been precisely that needed to deprive them of weight. He protested against the election of members of the Legislature by the armed invasion, but neglected to declare the election null. Proclaiming Kansas conquered by an alien mob, he abandoned the territory to the invaders and repaired to Washington, where he could neither do nor say anything whatever for its relief. And now,—declaring that he cannot recognize the assembly at Shawnee as a Legislature, because it is illegally assembled,—he does recognize it by treating their acts as legitimate, by receiving them, giving them consideration, and sending in messages explaining the reasons for withholding from them his approval. Vetoing a legislative act is certainly a strange mode of ignoring the Legislature that passed it. By receiving its enactments as Governor,—giving them due and careful consideration, and sending in messages concerning them, he recognizes the legal and legitimate existence of the Legislature as perfectly and completely as possible. It makes not the slightest difference whether he approves or disapproves its acts. A veto recognizes the existence of a Legislature just as effectually as a message of approval. And so long as Gov. Reeder continues to send in messages vetoing the enactments of the Kansas Legislature, just so long will they have his own acts as evidence of their power to act, in opposition to his opinion that they are an illegal and non-existent body. The Governor has shown, throughout his administration, a very happy faculty of stultifying himself by just such discrepancies as these between his actions and his words. He contends, and we think rightly, that with him alone rests the power of designating the place for the temporary meeting of the Legislature. Why, then, did he not issue his Proclamation commanding them to meet at the place desired, and forbidding their attempting to hold a session elsewhere? Instead of thus treating the matter as one belonging exclusively to the Executive department, he recognized it by his veto as a proper subject for legislation; and then, of course, a two-thirds vote dispensed with the necessity for his approbation.

All this, it is true, does not modify in the slightest degree the character of the President's action in his removal. The fact remains,—that he was turned out of office because he would not cooperate, willingly and heartily, with the propagandists of Slavery;—and his ejection was cloaked under the false pretext that he had been illegally dealing in Indian lands.

So far as Kansas is concerned, we see no immediate remedy for the evil inflicted upon her. Her Territorial Legislature will unquestionably proceed to legalize Slavery;—and any future Legislature that may seek to remove this action, must encounter the reproach and the difficulty of seeking to abolish an institution recognized by law, and to destroy claims of property vested in individuals. All this greatly complicates the question, and renders it more and more certain that Kansas will not long apply for admission to the Union as a Slave State.

Reform.

We received, by the last arrival from Europe, a copy of the Reform petition from the people of England to its commons in Parliament assembled. It is a document worth some passing notice. For, in its outspoken truth and undoubted earnestness of purpose—in the determination of its originators to obtain from their rulers, by force if necessary, the reforms they demand—we recognize the old Democratic spirit of the English people that has lain dormant since the days of CROMWELL. The petition comes from the National and Constitutional Reform Association. It is essentially—if we may so speak—an Anglo-Saxon document; it is to the point, and, for vigor of style and homeliness of language, might pass current for one of those old memorials to the Parliament of CHARLES I, which warned the then British oligarchy of a coming Rebellion that has done more towards raising England to her present position than any other event in her history, either before or after.

The petition first boldly exposes the shame and disgrace that have fallen on the country, through the culpable neglect and incapacity of men in office. After stigmatizing the landing on the Crimea as an act of desperate aggression, it asserts that there existed neither order nor regulation in transports, in supplies in victuals, in clothing, or in shelter for the troops; but in place of these were unheard-of neglect and waste, whereof the consequence has been that the soldiers have filled the field with their carcasses—roads they made not—shelter they found not—victuals, clothing, and medicine they had not—graves alone they had when hands could be spared to dig them. So now, the petitioners continue to say, "when the fierceness of the struggle has come—when it is a question whether this nation or the hosts of the enemy shall perish—our numbers are scanty and our men enfeebled, and the strength of the foe is increased daily, which latter thing our Cabinet Ministers appear not to have foreseen, thereby committing a deadly sin of ignorance, which issue no British subject can contemplate without alarm and indignation." But the petitioners do not stop here. They attack alike the men and the system, and allege that an oligarchy—"a corporation of the worst rulers England ever saw"—persist in their evil course of ruin. "They sacrifice an army and attribute it to the badness of the system, which system they seek not to amend but retain, stultifying themselves and mocking the requirements of the nation. In every fresh detail folly exceeds folly, and no provision is made to meet further peril." The petitioners also affirm that they have had opportunities of learning the true desires of the people in the matter of foreign alliances, and that they prefer national to dynastic alliances—"the alliances of freemen rather than jailers; of peoples than tyrants." Speaking of the British Cabinet, the petitioners style it "a secret and illegal cabal, shrouding its acts in obscurity, meeting to deliberate that which is never made known to the House, much less to the nation; and one member, styling himself Foreign Secretary, deals with foreign affairs, and is in reality amenable to none and another is Home Secretary, and a third Colonial Secretary, whose several fitness and aptitude for their offices are not duly considered, but only the convenience of a corporation of lordly rulers." The petitioners lastly remind the House of Commons that Governments, both Legislative and Executive, exist not for themselves but for the governed; that "when nations are ill governed they are apt to rise, and that resistance becomes constitutional when sense and justice are continually violated; since principles are of Heaven not man, and public safety is the first law of nations."

The document, which is receiving signatures by tens of thousands, is significant enough. It boldly exposes the despotism of that oligarchy which now governs England, and the rottenness of the system that has entailed within the last year such disgrace and disaster upon the nation. We have long since marked those very grievances against which complaints are now so hotly urged. We have spoken of them, too, though not so bitterly, and we have exposed them, though not so ruthlessly, as the members of the Reform Association have done in their petition. Those Englishmen in this country who have accused us of attempting to degrade their country are now doubtless convinced that, after all, we have been lenient with the shortcomings of an oligarchy that a few parasites still love to honor.

Mysteries of Book Publishing.

There are secrets in all trades, some of which are past finding out except by those who serve an apprenticeship to them; but there are others which cannot well remain in a state of occultation from the very nature of the business. Publishing, for instance, is of necessity a public business, the profits of which increase in proportion to its publicity; but there are secrets even in the publishing business which ordinary people cannot discover. Publishing was once a rather slow and easy and respectable business, and books were written and printed to stand the test of public examination. If they were good, the public "found them after many days;" they were bread cast upon the waters; reviewers read them at their leisure, and in due time judgment was pronounced upon them; they sold, or sold their publisher, as the case might be, and abided their fate as they had bided their time. Merit then had something to do with popularity, but it has very little now. The public are often taken by surprise at the announcement of some new work, when the same advertisement which first gives notice of its publication tells also of the two or three hundred thousand copies of it which have been sold, and gives the favorable notices of it which have been written from all parts of the country. The question naturally enough arises in the mind of some innocent reader, how it could be possible for a hundred thousand copies of a book to be sold before it is published, and how it can be favorably noticed before it has been seen. But such things are possible enough, because they are continually occurring. All that is required to effect these miracles is a book, the poorer in style the better for the purposes of the publisher—for those who engage in this kind of business pay the public the compliment of assuming that they can't discriminate between a good book and a bad one.

We published a day or two since an article on the secrets of the wine trade, and we now lay before our readers, in another part of this day's paper, for their amusement and instruction, an article which we copy from the Presbyterian Critic, revealing some of the secrets of the publishing business, and explaining the processes by which an immense popularity is gained for a certain class of new and original publications. The Critic makes a very great mistake in imagining that the work which called forth its denunciations was written by one of the publisher's clerks, for it was written by the author of a good many flash stories, who would just as soon compose a treatise on theology as write a novelette, provided he got the same pay;—and publishers' clerks are something like the French manager, who, on being asked why he didn't write his own vaudevilles, replied, "Why don't you black your own boots?"

The Pardoning Power.

The logic of modern politics judges a principle or a system by its liability to abuse. Merit in its scale is nothing, demerit weighty. Distinguished lawyers arraign the laws against intemperance, and hide their benefits in search of apprehended evils. And in kindred spirit orators and editors too often attack the acts of public men when theirs are the merits, whilst the defective systems which control them invite the blunders. Especially has the exercise of the pardoning power been misrepresented and attacked. But the matter rightly viewed, the wonder is more that so few mistakes occur in the exercise of Executive clemency, and less, that imposition often triumphs in receiving it.

By the Constitution the Governor is made the sole arbiter of pardons—the statutes only controlling the manner of application. Any one who adds up the column of State Prison inmates annually reported by the Inspectors, perceives that the convict population of the Empire State surpasses that of many thriving and important villages. If to the total be added the inmates of county jails and city prisons and penitentiaries, (who once fully committed on conviction have no outlet but by Executive key,) the number will equal the population of more than one incorporated city of the State. It is the tender maxim of the law that a man is innocent until found guilty; but the friends and relatives of prisoners extend this saying, to mean that innocence in each particular case exists notwithstanding conviction. There are fifty-three counties in the State, each possessing a criminal Court and a jail. The avenues to Executive clemency are free to all, from the blinded relative of the terrible murderer to the timid friend of the insignificant purloiner of coppers from a till.

With these statistics in outline, one easily understands how the Constitution, which virtually stripped our Executive of patronage, gave to him in the pardoning prerogative a fearful task, a melancholy duty and a thankless responsibility. Day by day from the cities, towns and villages of the State, come to Albany the deputations of heart-stricken mothers, sorrowing wives and weeping children, imploring the pardon of son or husband, or parent, in whose innocence, despite most confirming testimony of guilt, they entertain a sincere belief. As the Judge is obliged to grant a writ of habeas corpus when asked on the proper papers; so the Executive is obliged to listen to their complaints and appeals. Then succeeds to these a train of political friends, often judicial advisers, sometimes official coadjutors, occasionally functionaries from sister States—in a few cases the Federal minister, the foreign diplomatist and the consul. Letters are to be written to prosecuting attorneys and judges. The Attorney General is to be advised with. Quires of testimony pro and con to be waded through, until the end of the Executive term finds an accumulation of cases, papers and documents in the matter of pardoning, the bare sight of which astonishes even the veteran red-tapist.

The pardoning power to this extent is in the hands of a Governor who has a thousand other duties; its careful exercise alone would require his uninterrupted attention. Is not this an evil? Should it not be remedied? Either let an amendment of the Constitution provide for a council of pardons as a bureau of the Executive department, or let the statutes so control the manner of application for pardons that distressing personal interviews may be avoided, imposition on Executive confidence be prevented, and the whole subject become so fenced with formalities that only cases of probable success may be carried into the Capitol.

The Prohibitory Law.

As long ago as in April last we mentioned, upon what we believed to be sufficient authority, that, in the opinion of the Attorney General of the State, the Prohibitory law, then recently enacted by the Legislature, was unconstitutional. In view of the fact that the Attorney General is the legitimate law adviser of the Executive department of the State Government, and the one upon whom (if upon the State at all) would devolve the duty of upholding the law in the Court of Appeals, we considered the report important enough to deserve being mentioned. We see it now announced in Albany papers that Mr. HOFFMAN has given to the Governor an official opinion to the same effect. We do not know on what authority the statement is made, nor what occasion has arisen which would render it necessary for the Governor to apply for his opinion in the premises. But whether it has been asked, or given, or not, we believe it is generally understood that the law is regarded by the Attorney General as unconstitutional, and that, if he should give an opinion at all, it would be to that effect.

Swindling Explained.

Mr. TUCKERMAN, the great Boston Schuyler, defrauded the Eastern Railroad, it seems, of $245,303. The process by which this magnificent result was accomplished during the ten years he held the office of Treasurer, is explained in detail by that portion of the report of the Investigating Committee which we publish in another column this morning. The leading and essential fact in the whole case seems to be, that his own word was always relied on in reference to his own proceedings. Even when Committees, Examiners and Accountants were appointed to audit his accounts, he always gave them his valuable assistance. He read from the ledger, for example, a list of the shares of stock issued; and by reading here and there what was not entered, but what he knew was necessary to the result desired, the footings always came out properly. And then, after such a farce, the Committee would issue long and eloquent commendations of his accuracy, skill and unrivaled method of keeping his books!

It seems that in this way TUCKERMAN overissued stock to the value of at least $66,300,—and notes to very nearly the same amount: while he used cash belonging to the Company, to the amount of over $100,000. He seems to have kept no cash account at all worthy of the name, and yet his books were regularly audited and approved by the proper Committees. He has property to the amount of about $60,000 which he turns over to the Company, and various other assets from which he thinks something may be realized. He is said to have invested $50,000 in a patent for tanning leather,—which might not unprofitably be applied to his own hide;—and another $50,000 is declared to have been loaned to Dr. MORTON, for the purpose of helping him procure from Congress a recognition of his right to be deemed the discoverer of ether. The Company preserve a mysterious silence on this subject, but the revelation was made by a member of that meddling and blabbing fraternity, the Press.

Mr. TUCKERMAN evinces a great deal more philosophy in his exposure than SCHUYLER did. Instead of running away, he stays to help the Committee ferret out his rascalities. He seems to have been very useful in this way, as it is doubtful whether they could have traced his operations at all without his help. We have not heard whether they intend to present him a service of plate, for his assistance, or not. According to precedent, however, he will be entitled to a strong puff in the next annual report of the Directors. The Boston Bee meantime thus speaks of his daily walk:

"Mr. TUCKERMAN continues unharmed by law, and is seen daily on 'Change, apparently as of old. Meantime, Peter Jones, his neighbor, who stole half a barrel of pork to keep his family from starving, is passing an industrious and ignominious six months in the House of Correction, and feeding on coarse bread, corn beef and water. Such is 'even-handed justice!'—such the 'perfection of human wisdom'—law!"

Perils of Sea Bathing.

The Worcester Transcript, noticing the recent calamity at Coney Island, and the accidents that so frequently occur at sea-side watering-places, asks:

"At all of these places, would it not be a wise precaution to station a swift row-boat or skiff—manned by a couple of experienced oarsmen, good swimmers as well—within saving distance of the bathers? and thus, as we believe, secure a means of rescue to nine out of ten of all whose lives are now imperiled."

Such a precaution would not only be wise, but it ought to be imperative. Nothing in these announcements of disasters is more shocking, than the statement which generally accompanies them, that no provision whatever had been made for such exigences,—that no boats were to be found, and no men were ready to extend aid. A place like Coney Island,—so very dangerous, by reason of the current and under-tow that always prevail there,—ought not to be visited at all for bathing, until some provision is made for saving life. It is disgraceful that men should build hotels, provide bathing accommodations, and entice the inexperienced into the dangers of the surf, and yet make not the slightest preparation for saving them in case of peril. Coney Island every Summer is the scene of many fearful accidents of this sort, and yet the same story continues to be told,—no boats were to be had,—no means of rescue had been provided. It seems to us that the law might very well interfere in such cases, and require that all who proffer inducements to sea-bathing, should take suitable precautions against the sad accidents that are now of such frequent occurrence. But public sentiment could, undoubtedly, enforce such a regulation in the absence of law. If people would desert every place where no such provision is made, and give the preference to those which consult the safety of their guests as well as their own pecuniary profit, they would speedily work a reform in this matter of the highest importance.

Deferred Nuisances.

We are in the daily receipt of letters written from all parts of the country in relation to the disagreeable qualities of the Ailanthus and the assistant librarian of the Astor Library, but we cannot afford room for any more testimonials in respect to these nuisances. Both the Ailanthus and the librarian, we believe, are greatly improved; the tree has passed its flowering season, and, if we could forget its two or three weeks of nauseousness, we should be disposed to regard it with a favorable eye, for even its greatest enemy must admit that, in its present state, with its large bunches of golden blossoms, it is a very beautiful object. As to the librarian, we have reason to believe that he has seen the importance of courteous behavior to the visitors to the library, though we have not received any testimonials to the effect. Another of the permanent nuisances which we have received some bushels of letters about, is the filthy condition of the streets, and this old and standing cause of complaint has been greatly modified by the abundant rains of the past, and the streets that have been "washed, lately washed in a shower," look now remarkably, in fact, almost impossibly clean, notwithstanding that the street-sweeping machines have suspended operations. So these old nuisances are, for the present, obsolete ideas, and our correspondents had better find some new subjects for their benevolent pens.

Cruelty Denied.

In another column we publish a letter from Mr. ALFRED LEWIS, of Paris, Ky., in reply to statements accusing him and his wife of cruel and inhuman treatment of some of their slaves. It seems that they were tried upon this charge in one of the Kentucky Courts. Mr. LEWIS insists that the reports were grossly exaggerated, that no such punishments were inflicted as those reported, and that the grossest injustice was done to him, and especially to his wife, by the rumors referred to. We copy the letter at his request. Its statements will, doubtless, attract the attention of the public.

☞ Ex-Governor TROUP, of Georgia, ventures upon a task which seems to have dismayed all the younger and less hardened members of the Democratic party. He has written a letter, which will be found in another column, vindicating President PIERCE from the accusations which meet him on every side, and declaring that his Administration is "the least exceptionable of all the Administrations we have ever had—WASHINGTON's, JEFFERSON's and Polk's (!) not excepted." The Southern people, especially, he declares, are "bound by honor, gratitude and patriotism to sustain it with all their might." The Ex-Governor makes a half-way work about the job he has undertaken. His zeal puts even the Washington Union to the blush.

☞ It seems that the escaped slaves of Col. WHEELER have arrived in this City. One of them, the mother of the family, appeared yesterday and made affidavit before Judge CULVER, that she was not opposed to being rescued from Slavery, as Col. WHEELER asserts,—that on the contrary she suggested the rescue and would not for any consideration, return to her former condition. Her affidavit,—which she signed by making her mark after hearing it read,—will be found in another column, and tells the whole story.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Removal of Gov. Reeder—Affairs in Kansas—Difficulties with Paraguay—Our South American Relations.

WASHINGTON, Monday, July 30, 1855.

The Secretary of State is conveniently out of the way. The subject of territorial appointments is within his department, and he signs the commissions. The removal of Gov. REEDER would probably have obtained from Gov. MARCY a very reluctant consent—perhaps he would not have consented at all. The report of REEDER's being superseded by DAWSON of Pennsylvania, is current this morning, but is doubted. It is probable enough, but so little interest is felt in any action of the President that nobody seems inclined to verify or disprove the rumor. DAWSON is an involuntary Nebraskal. He goes with his party, and generally goes it blind. He will stand in nobody's way in Kansas, nor anywhere else, and is just the thing which ATCHISON demanded originally as his lieutenant under the Nebraska bill.

There is other business urgently demanding the attention of the Secretary of State. The dispute with the Government of Paraguay has assumed a shape very like that which for many years held in solution our relations with Mexico, until the difficulty was adjusted by war. A special mission is asked for to arrange the difficulty with the Water Witch, and several heavy and well founded claims by American citizens. Paraguay and all the little States in the interior will at no distant day be swallowed up by Brazil. In the meantime, we have to secure indemnity out of the annexation fund which Brazil is silently accumulating. The present Government of Paraguay, like most of the Spanish American States, is afflicted with a chronic vacancy in the chest, and with demands upon it urgent in proportion to its vacancy. The claimants who have at length appealed to our Government have vainly solicited justice for the last ten years. Their claims amount in the aggregate to a sum hardly exceeding the probable expenses of a special mission, but fortunately the national honor is involved through the attack on the Water Witch, and that is invaluable.

The authentic report of the proceedings of the Kansas Legislature shows the very worst and most degrading rumors previously circulated through the Western press to be strictly correct. How long will such outrages on decency be tolerated? It should be remembered that the voluntary meeting of border ruffians is held at the expense of the United States, and in the name of a law of Congress. Though they have forfeited the legal sanction which Gov. REEDER unadvisedly and most wrongfully extended to them, by granting certificates of election which he knew they were not entitled to, it is difficult to see how they can be deprived of the powers of mischief with which that act has invested them. With an honest Administration, the case would be a clear one. The pretended Legislature is a mob, and nothing more. Not a dollar of public money should be allowed them for pay or incidental expenses of their proceedings. The executive power of the Territory should be used to prevent the desecration of the national flag under which these men assemble. Without the Federal Treasury to fall back upon, these worthy persons would adjourn to the corner groceries which have heretofore been their headquarters.

There is, however, one barrier against the consummation of their schemes. All territorial laws must be submitted to Congress before going into effect—what chance exists for the confirmation of such infamous projects of law as were propounded by the ringleaders of this mob? This circumstance, perhaps, has not crossed the minds of these worthies. The House will also take care to stop the rations of our amateur legislators. Their authority will be brief, and I trust their influence as fleeting.

P. S.—The President has to-day disaffirmed the contracts of REEDER, ELMORE, JOHNSON & ISAACS, for the purchase of half-breed lands. This is, perhaps, the foundation of the story relative to REEDER's dismissal. AQUINAS.

A bear weighing 370 pounds was shot at Colebrook, the 21st inst. He was discovered near the roadside, within half a mile of the village. He fled to a neighboring swamp. A dog was put upon his track, when he soon emerged from his retreat, and was brought down by a dozen or more shots. Three other bears were seen in the vicinity the same evening.

Suspension of Judgment.

The Marine Court, it seems, although competent to declare judgment for the recovery of a debt, can not compel the Sheriff to execute the writ of judgment placed in his hands. A Mr. SUYDAM, the "old veteran of the turf," obtained in the Marine Court, a few minutes since, judgment for the sum of $200 against the notorious JAMES IRVIN, by whom he was beaten at Lafayette Hall the other night. The writ for the execution of the judgment was placed in the hands of Sheriff OSBORN, but he refused (for reasons best known to himself) to serve it on his friend IRVIN, and for such refusal was sued for damages by SUYDAM. This last suit was brought before Judge MCCARTHY, of the Marine Court, yesterday.

When the counsel for the defense contended that the Court had no jurisdiction over the case in question,—that the laws relating to it were specific, and did not empower it to compel the Sheriff to serve writs of execution upon those against whom judgments were rendered—the Judge held the counsel's view of the case to be correct, and dismissed the case for want of jurisdiction. The Sheriff OSBORN has legally the power to nullify the decision of the Court, and boasts his friends, who will no doubt reciprocate the compliment.

Death of Moses Maynard, Jr.

MOSES MAYNARD, Jr., Esq., a well-known citizen, died at his residence in Greenwich-place, this City, on Sunday, and was interred yesterday. Mr. MAYNARD was a Whig in politics, and was in 1848 elected Alderman from the Eighteenth Ward, which position he filled for one year. He was subsequently chosen President of the Long Island Railroad Company, which office he soon resigned, and was succeeded therein by Mr. MORRIS, the present incumbent. Mr. MAYNARD was at the time of his death about 40 years of age.

☞ To-day Castle Garden is to be opened as the Emigrant Landing Dépôt—and having wiped our tears at the loss of the dear old Garden, where KOSSUTH landed, and SONTAG strained her delicate throat lining, and JULLIEN's immaculate coat shone transcendent, and Judge MEIGS, year after year awarded the Institute Premiums, and the beautiful Panoramic views were visible,—having had our shivel in a gentle and melancholy way, we confess we are glad of it. Now, may Emigrants have a chance, and the poor emigrants get a little more decent treatment, and the sharks that have torn them so ruthlessly be starved out. Not to foreigners, but to Humanity the Garden should be dedicated to-day with appropriate ceremonies.

From the Southern Times.

Each month it gladdens us and our household, to say nothing of the neighbors who enjoy it with us. Twenty-five cents buys the cheapest, richest and most lasting luxury for the money that we know. Three dollars saves it for one year; and what three dollars ever went so far! Put the same amount in clothes, eating, drinking, furniture, and how much of a substantial thing is obtained! If ideas, facts and knowledge are of any value; if we want to see the humor that refreshes, the pleasantries that bring a gentle smile, and brighten the pathway of a truth to your brain, and the happy combination of the real and the imaginative, which makes life so pleasant, and the ideal so ideal, are to be put into the scale opposite to dollars and cents, then you may be certain, that if HARPER were three or four times as dear, it would amply repay its price. It is a Magazine proper, with the idea and purposes of a Magazine; not a weekly political, nor yet a supplier of gossip and chatty anecdotes—but a Magazine that takes every form of interesting, dignified and attractive literature in its grasp.

TERMS.—The Magazine may be obtained of Booksellers; Periodical Agents; or from the Publishers, at THREE DOLLARS a year, or TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a Number. The Semi-annual Volumes as completed, nearly bound in Cloth, are sold at TWO DOLLARS each, and muslin covers are furnished to those who wish to have their back numbers uniform in bound, at TWENTY-FIVE CENTS each. Ten volumes are now read-ye bound.

The Publishers will supply Specimen Numbers gratuitously to Agents and Postmasters, and will make liberal arrangements with them for circulating the Magazine. They will also supply Clubs, of twenty copies, at Five Dollars a year, or five persons at Ten Dollars. Clergymen supplied at Two Dollars a year.

From the New-York Commercial Advertiser.

"Harper's Magazine" and "Harper's Story Books" will henceforth be welcomed as joint visitors in thousands of families where there are juvenile readers to be pleased as well as adults.

From the Louisville Courier.

We have heard so many fathers and mothers who recognize the pleasant duty of guiding the minds of their children in the paths of knowledge at home, speak in terms of the highest commendation of this series of books for children, that we feel a desire to see them universally read among children. They constitute the finest series of books for the young that we have seen.

From the Vicksburg Whig.

All of Abbott's stories are powerful by children to any others, because they contain no his natives of improbable events, but just what happened to some boy or girl, or girl on any day in the year. If parents would place just such books as these in the hands of their children they would find less trouble in governing them.

From the Lutheran Observer.

These books have never been surpassed by anything gotten up for the profit and pleasure of the little people.

TELEGRAPH.

MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH—MORSE LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE, WASHINGTON, AND INTERMEDIATE STATIONS.—Six wires and two lines of poles the entire distance, and seven wires between New-York and Philadelphia.—RATES REDUCED AND MESSAGES INSURED. Shortest dispatch increased from ten to twenty words.

The MORSE Line of Magnetic Telegraph, from Washington to New-York, is the first Company Telegraph Line ever constructed in this Country, and believed to be the most efficient working line in the world. It has more wires and greater facilities for Telegraphing than any other in the United States. With a view to the greatest good to the public, the limit to the shortest dispatch has been fixed at twenty words, instead of ten as heretofore, thus removing the inducement of those using the Telegraph, to abridge their messages as often to render them unintelligible. These multiple abbreviations often have led to error in the transmission of dispatches, resulting in loss to the parties interested and in discredit to the Telegraph, which is too frequently charged with the errors of careless writers and blundering operators.

[CONFIDENTIAL.]

We have had upon our table for a month past, a volume of some 300 odd pages, which came accompanied by letters, of those remarkably New York Confidences, to which we have already had occasion to call the attention of our readers, in reference to Mr. JOHN LIVINGSTON, humorously Confidential, at No. 137 Broadway.

We have been some what at a loss to know what to do in the premises, as the printed Card, which we receive the MS. letter, is especially marked "Confidential." We conclude on the whole, that as this case is intended to be one of the "confidentials" of the modern fashion—a sort of intellectual degree of the confidential, which one is so revealed only to one's 1,000 particular friends and strangers, further, of the peculiarly intimate relation between us and our readers—we are at liberty in this private way, to let them into our place secret, to whisper in what transpires behind the curtain in a great New-York publishing house, and therefore present them—first with the letter (the "more than enough" letter written with a pen,)—and then the "Card—(confidential)" printed on the other side of the letter.

NEW-YORK, May 5, 1855.

Rev. STUART ROBINSON—Dear Sir: With this please find, for your acceptance and perusal, a copy of a new work which we shall issue on the 1st of June, entitled "Confidential Disclosures of Modern Fashionable Life." It is the first of a series of six books, of the Modern Fictional type, the six leading evils of modern society, which we have in press, and which we shall take great pleasure in forwarding to you as fast as issued. The series is designed to the overthrow of the popularity of those who profess to be governed by the Bible, exposing the hypocrisies with the world and worldly Christians, flaws in the real Christian's path; and, thereby, the glorious triumph which awaits the cause of Christ, more effectually to the end. It has been highly spoken of by a friend, that of the clergymen of the Union, who, we have acquainted with the aim and character of the work, that they would heartily unite in praying for its success. We should, therefore, dear Sir, be happy to learn that its publication meets your hearty approval, and if, at any time hence you may render us so that end, or any other, you may kindly make a reference to bringing it properly before the christian world, will be gratefully remembered by

Yours, very truly, ——— & CO.

CARD.—(CONFIDENTIAL.)

The position of the undersigned brings to them, daily, from various quarters, numerous literary projects, of every kind and character, of which scarcely one per cent. are found, upon examination, to possess sufficient practical value to entitle them to an earnest consideration. During the past year we received and examined over four hundred manuscripts and literary projects. Of this number we discovered but one which, in our judgment, would warrant a prudent Publishing House in investing its time, capital and business machinery in bringing it to the attention of the public. Our judgment may be wrong, however. He who ventures, plucks up from a bed of rubbish—a gem (literally) in the midst of a vast mass of pretentious but worthless paper. It was in the form of a manuscript, prepared, with the simple but modest remark that it was designed as the first of a series of six books upon the leading evils of modern society. Upon turning back to the first page we found that the work (the first of the series) bore the following simple but impressive title:

"The identity of the title, and the unity of the leading purpose, induced us to give a careful reading to the work, when we found the hand in immediately to the second, and to the third, and that caused till we reached the conclusion, when on looking around, we found ourselves in a state of mind, of which we presume us to be painful. The lamp light was burning dearly, brightly, and distinctly over our desk, while daylight stole softly through the venetian blinds of our office window, which looked out upon the street. A glance at the clock announced the hour of five, and a minutiae of fairness told of a neglected meal. We laid down the manuscript, and prepared for home and supper. On reaching the street we turned around to its purpose. The stores and offices were closed; the air was cool and dewy, and, with the exception of a single carrier and one driver, no one seemed astir. In an instant the conviction flashed upon us that our last, without knowing it, been up all night, and we commenced the reading of the manuscript, (which, in order truly done with less rapidity than when in printed form,) at 11 o'clock of the preceding day, we had consequently been engaged seventeen hours in the perusal, perfectly oblivious of the waste of nature, of the flight of time, of everything, in fact, except the fascinating narrative which had thrown around us the magic of its spell.

But they were seventeen hours which we never shall forget. It was not seventeen hours either—but a period of long years. It was not a book we were reading—it was a life, etc.

The impression made upon us by the manuscript was, as will be inferred from the foregoing, of an unusual character. To satisfy ourselves, however, that we had not been misled by our enthusiasm in its style, we submitted it to some of those who profess to be governed by its teachings, (exposing the hypocrisies with the world and worldly Christians flaws in the real Christian's path;) and, thereby, the glorious triumph which awaits the cause of Christ, more effectually to the end. It has been read by a friend, that of the clergymen of the Union

MEDICAL.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION,
By Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women. (One Hundred Editions (50,000) sold.—By Mail, (in the paper, extra binding, $1.)

Every woman can now be her own physician. By comparing her own symptoms with those described, the nature, character and cause of her complaint can be ascertained, and suitable remedies applied. The wife should be cautioned against the often fatal effects of improper medicines, and should take advice or be in respect to her situation, which she will have find. This book tells her what is the matter, and tells her what to do for it, in simple but chaste language, and such as can be understood.

Those suffering from obstructions or irregularities peculiar to the female system, or from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb,) or from fluor albus, will find, and in its pages the means of permanent amendment and relief.

Extract of a letter from a medical man in Dayton, Ohio.

DAYTON, May 1, 1847.

DR. A. M. MAURICEAU—My Dear Sir—My wife has been painfully sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of great anguish and suffering some months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in imminent danger. I recommended your book to her, and she has, on the last occasion, followed its directions, and such as could have saved her from all this, and restored her to health, I have no doubt, but for your book. I recommend it to all married females, and shall do so in future. Yours, &c.

Sent by mail, in a sealed envelope, on receipt of $1. Address DR. A. M. MAURICEAU, office No. 128 Liberty-st., New-York, or to box No. 1,326 New-York Post-Office.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—Dr. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over 200 certificates of its virtues, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a running sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth and stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the skin.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate cases of tetter or salt rheum.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

Reader, I refended over a thousand bottles within the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. Be sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always spoke for itself. There is two pints of it about this herb that appears to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1846; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In conclusion, I can say on the sides of its great and great popularity of the discovery. I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you can get, and wash of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 8 years, dessert spoonful; children from 3 to 8 years, tea spoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

MR. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in fond cases of Scrofula.

THE WARDS.

Ward Primary Elections.

Last night, according to advertisement, the Wards held their Primary Elections to choose delegates to attend the Syracuse Hard-Shell Convention (to be held Sept. 5.)

The order was to elect one delegate and one alternate from each Assembly District. But it happens that the Assembly Districts are but 16 in number, while the Wards number 22. In each of the Wards that constitute singly an Assembly District, the delegate and alternate were chosen directly. But where a District composed more than a Ward, they elected delegates to meet to-night and select from the delegates to the Convention. So below we give all the Syracuse delegates that have thus far been chosen. They are all out and out Hards—as thick shelled that they need to be opened with a knife—they close their hearts as tight against all the seductive applinsces of all Soft Administrations, that like quaboags when at the liveliest, you would probably smash and destroy them, before you could let daylight in upon their softer natures. DAN. SICKLES is one of them. Follows the list so far as chosen:

| Ward. | Delegate. | Alternate. |
|---|---|---|
| IV | Wm. Phillips, | Wm. Cleary. |
| V | [illegible] | John D. Dickson. |
| VII | [illegible] | Stephen Hentwick, |
| IX | George Slocum, | Sherman Rockwell, |
| X | John Brennan, | Jos. M. Marsh, |
| XI | Sam Slater, | Edwin Benton. |
| XII | Amasa J. Levy, | Wm. P. McOpraisik. |
| XIV | Dr. E. Snell, | Ed. E. Cavenagh, |
| XV | Place not discernable, | |
| XVI | Peter Mathews, | Jos. B. Bunson. |

Where the polls were held it was not only quiet, but in some of them even positively stupid. Generally there was no opposition. In the Fifth there were 235 polled, all told. In the Eighth the votes ran up to 410, and probably there were a hundred or two voters present during the election. Though it is understood that the force of coming up to vote, leaving wife and children and work, is often reproached, and some enthusiastic politician will put in votes enough before the polling begins to answer for all his absent friends.

In the Ninth Ward, a second ticket was offered bearing the names of WM. MARTINE, delegate, and DANIEL WILLIAMS, alternate. It found but few supporters, as was shown in the fact that the regular ticket had 315 majority. Our reporter, in his effort to get the result of the election in this Ward, was directed to the wrong place. In accordance with the direction given him he entered a large apartment crowded with turbulent spirits. He was asked to show his ticket. But as he had not gone to vote, and nobody had given him a ticket, he was nonplussed. He soon discovered that he had intruded himself into a meeting of the Liquor Dealers' Association of that Ward. The gentlemanly vendors, there congregated, he thought were commendably active in ejecting him. Having no business but a light hat, it was certainly his intention to retire just as soon as possible after discovering his mistake. If the rough grasp of the man who showed him the door was intended in kindness, he takes this occasion to return thanks. If he knew no better, he would advise him to seek better company and learn manners.

In the Fifteenth Ward, the place for the holding of the election was not stated in the public advertisement, and our Reporter was unable to find the spot, although he visited several liquor saloons in that Ward for that purpose. He is satisfied that there are Hards in the Ward, though how the multitudinous arrests under the Liquor law may have affected the old cups to their waste, he is not informed.

Houses to Let.

We wouldn't be vulgar for the world, but vulgar as we are, we must say that our friends, the landlords, have bitten their noses off, and no mistake. They asked high prices on their houses to let, and let them go vacant. They ask enormous rents and get them for about three-quarters of their property, while the remaining fourth goes unoccupied, save by rats, roaches, ghosts, and so forth. The Real Estate Journal says that there is more vacant property to let now than there has been at any time since the great panic of 1837. In Brooklyn it is about the same; property fetches about half its value when forced to a sale, and yet unwilling holders cannot rent at the rates that were current five years ago. Sir ISAAC, when his boot was burning, rang the bell for a servant to remove the pain—never dreaming that it was cheaper to haul up his foot. Our landlords are of the same philosophic family. That a reduction of rents to suit the times, would take their vacant houses off their hands, has not yet occurred to them, nor that half a loaf is better than no bread.

Rachel.

Portraits of RACHEL begin to abound in the shop-windows. As she is to arrive before the present month ends, we would respectfully suggest that the puffing ought to begin. Where are the heirs of RACHEL, and the fans with RACHEL on them, and the lives of RACHEL, and the stories of her filial affection and sisterly kindness, of her tender love for poor girls, and her charity to blind beggars—of RACHEL in the bath—(that did the job for GRISI)—and of RACHEL at the Church! Is "the man that manages the press" out of town, or is he simply asleep?

By the way, Yankees are fond of the good old Christian name Rachel—Rachel pronounced, as Aunt Rachel's name was, with a first class accent on the first syllable. May they so call her if they get enthusiastic! or must they ridiculously follow the French, and call her, almost as we call a certain sale—Ra-shelle! These are vital points. If that manager of the press is at Coney Island, we entreat him to come home and set us right at the start.

The Silver Spoon Snatched Out at Last.

In pursuance of a resolution recently passed by the Board of Supervisors, Mr. Comptroller FLAGG has finally stopped the pay of the four Court Clerks who were nominated by Mayor WOOD last January, and subsequently rejected by the Board of Aldermen. Though these favorites of our late Mayor (Mr. WOOD) have performed but little or no service during the past six months, the City Treasury has contributed some $2,000 or $3,000 towards the support of their families. At last the silver spoon is plucked out of their mouths.

A Disappointment.

As we were passing along Brooklyn Heights at about 10½ o'clock last evening, between Wall and Fulton Ferries, a sharp hissing noise, like the rush of steam, suddenly issued from a warehouse occupied by Mr. OLIVER HOAR for storing drugs. This sound was immediately followed by a rush of flame and smoke from the windows and all parts of the building. A large number of persons assembled near the building, expecting to see the fire conquered by engines; but after waiting some time, without any further demonstration, slowly left the scene—greatly disappointed.

The Lager on Sunshine.

SAUGERTIES, Monday, July 30, 1855.

We had a lively time here to-day. Mr. VON BECK, one of the largest manufacturers of lager bier in this county, was hauled up for selling a couple of mugs of the lager. The loss to Mr. VON BECK, if the case had been decided against him, would have been $60,000. The case was dismissed by the Justice, after hearing the arguments of counsel. He did not believe he had the right to try the case.

There is plenty of lager and something a little harder to be had in Ulster County.

Sunday Parade and Review.

Yesterday morning, the Newark (N.J.) Continental Guard, Lieut. COX, Commanding, arrived in Brooklyn, in accordance with an invitation from the Brooklyn Washington Life Guard, Capt. PHILLIPS. They were received by the Life Guard, and after parading through some of the principal streets, both Companies proceeded to Staten Island for exercise, and the enjoyment of a day pleasantly and socially together.

At Clifton Park they were received by the New-York Independent Grenadiers, Capt. IRWIN, also out for a day's exercise and pleasure. The three Companies looked well and experienced a joyful day.

The Yorkville Police Court.

The new Police Court for the upper end of the island has at last been organized, by the daily presence of Justice BOGART and his Clerk, JOHN QUACKENBUSH. As yet, there is but little criminal business transacted at this Court, but it will very soon increase, when the people of the district find out it is opened. The Court is held at the corner of Eighty-sixth-street and Fourth-avenue, and already one or two Skinners have found their way there.

Liquor Dealers, Hurry Up.

The Liquor Dealers' Societies have not relaxed in their vigilance or in their measures to thwart the Prohibitory Law. They meet regularly, and are actively engaged in collecting the needful wherewith to establish Capt. FRENCH's proposed Anti-Maine Law journal. They are yet, we understand, a long way off from that $100,000, but seem to be sanguine of raising that amount. They must pay up their contributions, or else their print will be too late for the Fall campaign.

☞ The gentlemen so superfluously mentioned in the Post, in connection with a recent and casualty, wish to say that they are not responsible for the innocent, yet inconsiderate and annoying paragraph in question. Their names were not called for, any more than that of the driver of a passing market cart.

☞ A man stands nightly in Division-street selling smoked eels. The Club that engaged to live only so long as its members in turn, at their several houses, should be able at each meeting to devise a new dish, will please take notice.

☞ "Hot Corn," is cried again in the streets.

Police News.

COMMOTION AMONG THE HISTRIONICS.

Yesterday, an actor, whose fame extends but little beyond the precincts of the Bowery, was arrested on a charge of larceny, in having wrongfully disposed of articles valued at from $600 to $700, the property of the complainant, a well-known dancouse of this City. From the evidence it appeared that the goods were held as security for the amount of $100 advanced. The Court was kept in a continued uproar, consequent upon the criminations and recriminations uttered on both sides. Mr. Justice Pearsey, after a patient hearing, dismissed the case—the parties agreeing to settle the difficulty by the payment of the money due.

ON A SPREE.

Thomas Belyer, the proprietor of a groggery at No. 248 West Thirty-eighth street, was with several other "convivial souls" deposited in the safe-keeping of the Warden of the City Prison on a charge of disorderly conduct. It appears that they together assembled at the grog-shop mentioned, and used their best efforts, and not without fair success, to create a disturbance after the most approved method, by fighting, dancing, shouting, &c. The names of the parties so arrested were Mary Donaldson, aged 27, a domestic, John Fitzgerald, Patrick Donohue, Patrick Finn, Michael Castles, John Curran, Thomas Belyer and John McCann. They were all natives of "Erin's Isle."

ARREST FOR SELLING DOMESTIC LIQUORS.

The keeper of a liquor store at No. 396 Eighth-avenue, named James Wallace, was yesterday arrested by Officer Ross of the reserved corps, and taken before Justice Pearsey, at Jefferson Market, charged with vending liquor of domestic manufacture in contravention of the provisions of the Prohibitory law. He was held to answer at the Sessions. The warrant was issued on the complaint of Talman Allaire, of No. 420 Eighth-avenue.

A BAD HUSBAND.

Julianne Agnew, of No. 46 Hudson-street yesterday preferred a complaint against her husband, Harvey Agnew, at the Tombs, for brutal treatment in taking from her her children and turning her out of-doors, as she alleges. She had been married to him nine years, and quarrels had lately arisen because of his habits of drunkenness. A warrant was issued for his arrest.

Accidents at the Cooper Institute.

A laborer, named GEORGE SHANLEY, employed upon the erection of the Cooper Institute, near Eighth-street, fell from a window of the third story to the ground, and sustained severe injuries. JOSEPH REID, another laborer, in descending a ladder to assist SHANLEY missed his footing and fell to the pavement. He was rendered insensible, and it is thought suffered more injuries than his companion in woe. Both were conveyed to the City Hospital.

Accident.

At 2½ o'clock on Monday afternoon an Irish laborer, in the employ of GEORGE NARRIN, the contractor for the grading of Eighty-sixth street, named GALLAHAN, had his leg broken by the fall of a quantity of earth upon him while he was excavating on the street near Avenue A. He was conveyed to the City Hospital, by Serj. DECKER.

Coroner's Cases at Public Institutions.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I perceive by your issue of yesterday that a correspondent, behind the bush of "Reform," makes a tissue of misstatements against the Coroners' Department generally, and the undersigned especially. By several respectable witnesses, I can refute the allegations there made, were it necessary to enter into the details of the case. However, the facts of the case are these: On the 28th of June last, Justice WELCH, of the Essex Market Police Court, requested me to take the post-mortem examination of a German woman, named MARGARET FERTIG, who had been shot some days previously at her residence, No. 260 Delancey-street. I immediately proceeded to the place, and summoned a Jury of twelve men, and took her examination, occupying the entire afternoon in the proceedings, she being extremely prostrated from the effects of the wound. I was then informed that the father of the prisoner charged with shooting her would have her properly taken care of. Since that time I repeatedly sent my deputy to inquire after the woman's health, and he made his last visit two or three days previous to her death.

On coming to my office last Saturday morning, Coroner O'DONNELL informed me that he was about proceeding to Bellevue Hospital, for the purpose of holding an inquest upon the body of a woman whose name, he said, was FERTIG. I thereupon informed him that I had the case already in hands, at the same time expressing myself much surprised that the deceased had been removed to that Institution. I immediately dispatched my deputy to the late residence of deceased, for the purpose of procuring her husband, the only living witness in the case. He was informed that he would not be at home until evening, so I was obliged to postpone the case for that day, and accordingly appointed 12 o'clock the following morning (Sunday,) for the proceeding of the inquiry. I went to the Hospital at the appointed time, and when about to proceed with the investigation, I was informed by my deputy that Mr. DALY had succeeded him, saying, that he would "Get the newspapers to attend to me," and not understanding what he meant by this, I immediately sent for him. He came at my request, when I asked him why he applied such threats to me, giving him at the same time, a statement in full of all the circumstances attending the case. In reply, he said he did not mean to have his language applied to me particularly.

Your correspondent not satisfied with his falsehoods relative to the above case, must forsooth go further and drag the poor "Lime-kiln Man" into the controversy. Now, in relation to this case, I would simply say, that after finishing the investigation in the case of the deceased woman, Doctor ARCHIBALD informed me that there was yet another inquest to be held at that Institution, on the person of the "Lime-kiln Man," at the same time informing me that it was impossible for him to testify to the cause of his death, without making a post mortem examination of the body. In accordance with the law governing such cases this was properly performed.

I would here state that I am not in good odor with some of the officials at Bellevue Hospital, from the fact that some of my investigations have not pleased certain of these gentlemen. This has been the case since the 17th of January last, when in the case of JOHN HALLOY, the jury rendered a verdict censuring the action in his case, which, in their opinion, was not consistent with the public good, and relative to which I was attacked in your columns in an article under the head of "Bellevue Hospital Treasurer Cases." This can readily be perceived by reading a card published by Mr. DALY in the Herald of yesterday, wherein he denies the existence of a rule a jury referred to in a verdict given at the Bellevue Hospital on last Sunday morning. By turning to the New-York DAILY TIMES of Jan. 24, 1855, you will find that in a communication from Drs. MAYNARD and HOADLEY, of Bellevue Hospital, these gentlemen quote the rule in the following words: "Hereafter, when the coroner comes to Bellevue Hospital, he must select his jury from a disease unobtrusive and not likely to be benefitted by medical treatment," for the purpose of avoiding the institution from the odium attached to that case.

Your correspondent says the Jury did not understand of what disease the "Lime-kiln Man" died. He must know this to be untrue, as he was present and heard me explain the terms used in the medical evidence, that death was caused by inflammation of the membranes of the brain. He says the county was taxed $39 for this investigation, when the death of the patient was the result of natural causes. Now, in test his veracity I would say that my charge for holding the inquest was $9 00, while Dr. ARCHIBALD's, of Bellevue Hospital, was $5—total, $19 00; not half the amount stated by your reforming correspondent.

I see he concludes his communication by expressing a hope that the work of reform may be brought home to the Governors of the Almshouse. In this I agree with him, and would recommend that they provide a proper Dead House, with ice and other necessaries, to guard against immediate decomposition of bodies until sufficient time shall elapse properly to investigate cases, and also give the friends of the deceased a fair chance to recognize or claim the corpses before interment in Potter's Field. This last object I deem of vast importance, not only in a criminal, but also in a civil point of view.

I now leave Believue for the present, assuring the officials there and the public generally that I court investigation into any official act of my life.

If I am correctly informed, there is no dead-house properly belonging to Bellevue. It was formerly in the Park, and was removed in the Spring of 1840 to Bellevue Hospital, and that it was then, as now, for the public use of the Coroner.

JOSEPH HILTON, Coroner.

Closing Exercises in Brooklyn Schools.

In addition to our notice of the closing exercises in Public School No. 6 in Saturday's TIMES, we would mention that similar exercises were held in No. 7, York-street, under the direction of Mr. BUCK and Miss SHACKFORD, Principals of the Boys' and Girls' Grammar Schools, and of Dr. THORNE, of the Official Board. Several of the pupils distinguished themselves in the various exercises. Miss MARIA MURPHY, in Algebra and Arithmetic, displayed very decided proficiency; also, Misses M. E. SHAW, A. DYER, and A. WRIGHT, Masters R. WARREN, W. PRIFARD, J. GRAHAM were very prompt and intelligent. This school is well taught. Misses SARAH HOLMES and ELIZA TAYLOR sang a duet well. Certificates were given out, addresses, &c., were made. A large number of parents were present. In No. 16, (Eastern District,) a presentation of a copy of Shakspeare (illustrated) and other valuable works, was made by the school officers and teachers to Mr. DRINKLY, First Assistant in the Boys' Grammar School, on the occasion of his leaving the school to take a position in one of our public schools.

In No. 18, Remsen-street, the principal feature was the presentation, by Mr. FITCH, Principal of the Boys' Grammar School, in behalf of the pupils of the second class, of a neat Britannia ware dinner and tea service to Mr. EDWARD BUSH, First Assistant, a very able and popular teacher, who has been appointed Vice Principal in the Twentieth Ward (new) School, No. 48, in Twenty-eighth street, near Sixth avenue. Commendatory remarks were made by Mr. FIELD and others. The occasion was one of much interest, Mr. BUSH having been connected with the school from its opening. A very large attendance of parents and visitors were present.

Mr. KIMBALL's class in No. 14, also made a very fair display of proficiency in their leading studies. Alderman HARRIS presided. There has been much more interest exhibited by parents during these closing exercises than ever before.

Election Districts of the Seventh Ward.

At the meeting of the Common Council on Monday night, the Seventh Ward was divided into three Election Districts, as follows:

First District—Commencing at the northeasterly corner of Bedford-avenue and Lynch street; running thence easterly along the southerly side of Lynch-street to Division avenue; thence southeasterly along the westerly side of Division avenue to Flushing-avenue; thence westerly along the northerly side of Flushing-avenue to Nostrand avenue; thence southerly along the westerly side of Nostrand avenue to Myrtle-avenue; thence westerly along the northerly side of Myrtle-avenue to Washington-avenue; thence northerly along the easterly side of Washington-avenue to Flushing-avenue; thence easterly along the southerly side of Flushing-avenue to Bedford-avenue; thence northerly along the easterly side of Bedford-avenue to the corner of Lynch-street, the place of beginning.

That portion of said Ward lying south of Myrtle-avenue, to be known as the Second District.

That portion of the said Ward lying north of Flushing avenue, northwesterly of Lynch-street, to be known as the Third District. The Ward formerly was divided into two Districts.

Fires.

A fire was discovered yesterday morning, about 1½ o'clock, by Officer BLOOMER, of the Third District Police, in the lime sheds of Messrs. VOORHEES & SPENCER, at the foot of Amity-street. It was extinguished by the officer, with the assistance of the neighbors. About 150 barrels of lime were destroyed. Loss about $300. Fully insured. The fire originated by water getting among the lime, which caused the barrels to burst and ignite.

A fire broke out about the same time in Schenck-street, near De Kalb-avenue, in a small stable. It was extinguished with trifling damage.

The Public Offices.

The Common Council at their last meeting made the following changes of the Public Offices in the City Hall. The office of the City Clerk to be removed to the room now occupied by the Assessors, and the Collector of Taxes and Assessments to occupy the room vacated by the City Clerk. The room now occupied by Judge MOORE to be given to the Assessors. The Chambers of Judge MOORE to be removed to the room adjoining the office of the District Attorney on the second floor of the City Hall. The changes to take effect immediately.

HULL, who charges him with passing a counterfeit $1 bill upon him, on the Bank of Cayuga Lake. The accused was held to bonds in the sum of $300, by Justice JACOBS, to answer the charge.

Censure.

The Common Council passed a resolution of censure upon Assistant Capt. LATHAM, of the First District Police, at the last meeting for disobeying the orders of the Mayor in not tearing down the circus tent of Mons. FRANCONI, on the 23d July, about which such a fuss was kicked up at the time.

The Common Council.

This body met on Monday night, last and remained in session until 1 o'clock for the purpose of finishing the business before them. After which they adjourned until the second Monday in September next.

The Board of Education.

At a meeting of the Common Council on Monday night, WILLIAM H. PEEK, Esq., of Green Point, was elected a member of the Board of Education in place of JOHN SILKWORTH, deceased.

The Generals in the Crimea and the Cabinets and Potentates at Home—Outward Show of French and English Cordial Alliance—No Change in the Plan of the Eastern Campaign.

From the Washington Correspondence of the Balt. Sun.

It is not to be supposed that the Generals of the Allied Armies before Sebastopol will suspend their operations on account of the Cabinet and street convulsions in London. Nor, on any account, will the pageant proposed by the French Emperor, and fixed for the 14th of August, upon the occasion of the visit of the feminine British monarch to Paris, be deferred. The outward pomp and show of a cordial alliance must be kept up at home, and Russia must not be allowed to suppose that even Austrian influence, and the neutrality of all Germany can bring the war-pursuing powers to reason. Parliament will not be dissolved, but will expire on the 10th by limitation. Lord PALMERSTON will not retire, but will, getting in Lord JOHN RUSSELL, defy the lightning of public indignation and breast the "storm," which he cannot "weather."

The latest and best advices from the Crimea disclose the fact that all the speculations as to a change in the plan of the campaign by General PELISSIER are without foundation. There is to be no campaign in the interior of the Crimea—no attempt to cut off communication between Sebastopol and Simpheropol, and no complete investment of the former place. On the contrary, General PELISSIER declared, upon the day he took the command and in the most explicit manner, that it was necessary to pursue the siege, and nothing but the siege. "Poursuivre le siege, et rien que le siege," are his words. The idea of a campaign in the Crimea with the design of bringing the Russians to a fight in the open fields, is, says my authority, adjourned, if not abandoned.

If the attack made on the 18th had been successful, it was to have been followed, almost simultaneously, by an assault on the Central bastion and upon the bastion de mot, and even Gen. BOSQUET's corps of observation would have been charged to make a diversion towards the plateau of a Mackenzie, with view to gain the best road from the Balbec. These facts show that there is no ground whatever for the pretence that Gen. PELISSIER acted hastily or without a plan, in the unfortunate movement of the 18th, which English and French presses have set up.

They hardly do him justice by their criticisms, and we ought to accept his own statement that he was obliged, by incidents that he did not foresee, to renounce the idea of pressing the assault, seeing that it could not be done without too much bloodshed. But, reverting to my authority, the French claim that they have not lost an inch of ground since the battle of the 7th of June; and that another time, they may have better luck. Meanwhile we are advised to believe nothing of stories of grand strategic movements, and to believe that the siege is to be the occupation of the Generals in command of the Allied armies. Private advices have satisfied me that the Russians will not be the first to complain of the want of water or of provisions, or of munitions of war.

It is not many years since I heard Mr. J. Q. ADAMS and Mr. HUGH LEGARE, of South Carolina, proclaim in Congress, and Mr. SAMUEL COLT declare, at his rooms in this city, that wars were over and gone by. The two former declared the first as statesmen and philosophers, and congratulated the world upon it, Col. COLT, at the same time, became convinced that his rifles, pistols and cartridges were no go, and that the time had come when nations would learn war no more; and, therefore, as I remember, he exploded powder and champagne, and divers other warlike munitions, in utter despair. Since that time, the whole world has been convulsed, war raging in both hemispheres, and always occurring without much warning.

As SIDNEY SMITH declared, a few years ago, "We have just done saving Europe, and I am afraid the consequences will be that we shall cut each others throats." The alternatives presented to all nations, except our own, and that may not long be an exception—is between war foreign and war domestic—for war is, if not the natural state, as Hobbs has it, the usual condition of mankind. These remarks might be applied, with some force, to events and proceedings which are passing before our eyes.

TUESDAY, July 31—P. M.

The Stock Market to-day was quite active, while in prices there was a pretty general improvement. Railway shares were freely dealt in. Reading seemed the brightest, 4,900 shares thereof having been purchased at both meetings of the Board, closing ¾ ⅌ cent. higher than yesterday. In Erie there were also large transactions during the early session, but only a limited business at the Second Board. Prices, however, were a shade firmer. New-York Central, ex-dividend, were in fair demand, and left off at 98¾. Michigan Central ruled quiet at 97¼, s60; Chicago and Rock Island at 96¾, and Galena and Chicago at 105½. A moderate inquiry prevailed for Illinois Central, which brought 91½; Cleveland and Toledo, which advanced ¼ ⅌ cent.; Cleveland and Pittsburg, which touched 50½, b60, and Panama, which rose ¼ ⅌ cent. Harlem and Hudson River were inactive, though quite firm. Of Railroad Bonds, the Board sales were to a fair extent. Illinois Central were ¼ ⅌ cent. dearer; do. Freeland, with privilege, 1½ ⅌ cent.; do. do. without privilege, opened at 86½, and closed at 87. Erie Convertibles, of '71, rose ½ ⅌ cent.; while Erie new Bonds were steady. Panama Bonds, second issue, were in more request, and reached 105. $10,000 New-Jersey Railroad Bonds brought 100; $4,000 Chicago and Rock Island Bonds, 96; and $1,000 New-York Central Sevens, 102½.

We heard that a considerable amount of Railway Bonds, purchased on Foreign account, were transmitted in the Boston mail for the Canada. The Bonds thus disposed of, were chiefly the Illinois Central Railroad Company's Freeland Bonds, the Erie, of 1875 and 1883, and the 6 ⅌ Cent. Bonds of the Michigan Central, all for the London market. There were no noticeable movements, in answer to Continental orders. In State Stocks, this day's transactions at both meetings of the Board were heavier. Missouri sixes sold freely and were steady. Ohio sixes, of 1860, realized 105½; and do. of 1875, 111@111½, closing at 111½. Indiana fives were taken at 85; California sevens, of 1870, at 86½; Louisiana sixes, at 93½, b3. $1,000 New-York City fives of 1858 brought 97. Cumberland Coal Stock was freely dealt in, and left off at 29½, b30. Other light fancies ruled about the same. The market generally closed firmly and buoyantly.

The Money Market presented no new feature. The Bank Statements published this morning were regarded as being quite favorable, and all parties seemed to have increased confidence. Loan and discount rates were unvaried, while there was far more money available to responsible borrowers than these needed. Foreign Exchanges were dull, and a shade lower, the principal closing quotations for the Boston steamer being, on London, 109¾@109⅞, and on Paris 5.3
